

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

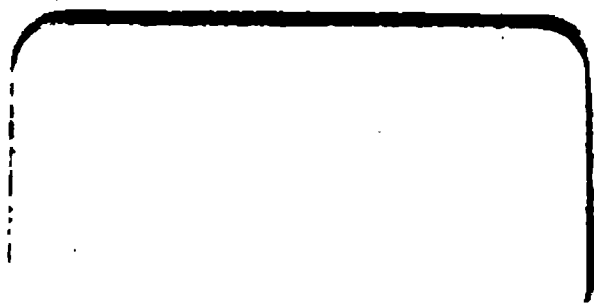

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

PREFACE.

The tracing of genealogies has become an ever more popular pursuit in recent years, until now many of the older and larger families of the country, especially the descendants from the early New England settlers, have a published volume on the subject. Several causes have led to this. One is the formation of patriotic societies, such as the Sons and the Daughters of the Revolution, and the desire to establish an eligibility to membership. Another cause doubtless is that, with the ever-increasing tide of foreign immigration, a relatively less number of our people trace back to ancestors who were here before the Revolution. Then there is the growing historical interest. Some people may be inclined to call the present eagerness to trace one's ancestry a "fad," and suppose that it will soon pass away. On the contrary, I believe that it is a work of importance and lasting interest. The motto of one of our genealogical magazines is "To preserve the memorials of our ancestors; a duty to them and to posterity." Certainly there will be those among our descendants who will be profoundly grateful to us for preserving from oblivion the knowledge of our families which is now attainable. Someone has said that "those who care nothing for their progenitors will themselves do nothing of which their own descendants will be proud." There may be exceptions to this, but I believe that genealogical interest marks an advanced stage of civilization and progress. Our New England ancestors were worthy, honorable, and God-fearing people. We owe to them not only our existence, and the qualities which we gain from heredity, but many of the blessings which we enjoy today in this land of liberty. A study of their lives will make us more anxious to emulate their virtues and to avoid any faults that would bring shame to our own descendants.

The present work owes its origin to the interest and labors of several persons. Mr. Rufus Corbin of New York began, about 1890, investigating his Corbin ancestry, and soon undertook the work of gathering material for a general family genealogy. About the same time Mr. Ernest Corbin, a school principal in Albany, N. Y., began similar work. Each of these was at first unknown to the other, but in 1894 they became acquainted, and, being congenial spirits, formed a close friendship and carried on the work together from that time on. They sent out a circular for information, and continued to gather information as they had opportunity, intending at length to combine it for publication. But Mr. Rufus Corbin died of typhoid pneumonia, February 12, 1898, and Mr. Ernest Corbin, though considerably younger, succumbed to typhoid fever August 26, 1899. The genealogical material gathered by the latter remained as he left it until November, 1903, when Mrs. Ernest Corbin very kindly handed it over to the present compiler, who had expressed a willingness to complete it. Unfortunately, much of Mr. Rufus Corbin's material was destroyed before that time, but what remained was also given to the compiler by the family. Probably the lost portion has nearly all been recovered. The gratitude of all Corbins is due to these two worthy representatives of the family, who did so much pioneer work to gather the facts of the family history and to arouse an interest in others.

The compiler put the material which came to him in order, and has added about three times as much to it to form the present work. Credit is due to many others who have collected information and who cheerfully put it at the disposal of the compiler. Among these he would mention especially, Mr. Monroe H. Corbin of Webster, Mass., Mr. Raymond Van Syckle of Detroit, Mich., Mr. William G. Bosworth of New York, Mr. Harmon Corbin of Friendship, N. Y., Mr. George Corbin of New Britain, Conn., Dr. G. E. Corbin of St. Johns, Mich., Mr. Henry Corbyn of Kirkwood, Mo., besides many others. Grateful acknowledgment is also made of the financial assistance rendered by several of the Corbins, which has made it possible to publish this book without loss and to insure some compensation to the compiler for the long task. Among these are: Mr. Harmon Corbin of Friendship, N. Y., Mr. Philip Corbin of New Britain, Conn., Mr. Jay Corbin and Mr. Amasa Corbin of Gouverneur, N. Y., Mr. William G. Bosworth of New York, and members of the family of the late Austin Corbin of New York.

The work as now offered is far from being complete in all lines. This is usually the case with every genealogy, as it is practically impossible to obtain a record of all the descendants. There are doubtless also many mistakes, although great pains has been taken to make everything complete and correct. Some persons are given fuller sketches than others equally or more deserving. This is due, not to partiality, but to the fact that the material came to hand in one case and not in the other.

The main body of the book is taken up with the descendants of Clement Corbin. Other Corbins settled in America, especially in Virginia. No attempt has been made to include this numerous southern branch, now widely scattered over the West. But there seems to have been at least one other line of New England Corbins from a different emigrant. These lived in western Connecticut, Dutchess County, N. Y., and Vermont. All the scattered information on this line of Corbins which has come in is included in the last part of the book. It may be of value later to some member of that line who wishes to prepare a complete genealogy of his branch of Corbins.

In July, 1904, at the kind invitation of Mr. Amasa Corbin, a number of Corbins gathered at the Murray Hill Hotel, Thousand Islands, and spent three or four days in delightful companionship. This was the first attempt at a general Corbin reunion. It is proposed to hold one in August, 1905, at Woodstock, Conn., the original home. It is hoped that the publication of this book and such reunions may serve to get the scattered Corbins acquainted with one another, stimulate a worthy family pride, and help us all so to live as to bring new credit to the already honored Corbin name.

The compiler, whose present address is Putnam, Conn. (or permanent address Union, Conn.), requests that any further information, especially in regard to the earlier generations or missing branches, be sent in to him, as he intends to continue his research on the family. If there is sufficient reason for it a supplement may be issued later.

THE NAME "CORBIN."

Bardsley's "Dictionary of English and Welsh Surnames" gives the following: "Corbyn, Carbine, Corbin; (1) local, 'of Corbyn,' probably a Norman locality; (2) baptismal, 'the son of Corbin.' Probably two origins."

Arthur's Dictionary of Surnames gives: "Corbin, local; the name of a place in Glencreon, Scotland, signifying a steep hill, from the Gaelic Cor-beann or Corbein."

I think, however, that both of the above explanations of the origin of the name are inadequate. The clew to its real origin is in the fact that the Corbin coat-of-arms had on it three ravens, with the motto, "Deus pascit corvos," "God feeds the ravens." It seems, therefore, that the sign of the Corbin family was the raven or crow — Latin, Corvus, French, Corbeau, or ancient form, Corbin — from which the name was undoubtedly derived. It seems that the hardy warriors belonging to this clan adopted the raven as their sign; hence the name.

The Corbins were originally French, or Norman, and the name in France today is spelled as with us, Corbin. In England, however, the prevailing spelling has been Corbyn. One branch of the descendants of Clement Corbin, the family of Joseph P. (William, Philip, James, Clement), in which there were three brothers who were Episcopal clergymen, adopted the spelling Corbyn, which they continue to the present day. These brothers, on traveling in England, found the name spelled Corbyn there and considered that the more correct, as formerly i and j were the same.

THE CORBINS OR CORBYNS IN ENGLAND.

The history of the Corbins goes back to the time of the Norman Conquest, when William the Conqueror defeated the Britons at the battle of Hastings in 1066 and was crowned king of England the next year. Then began the Norman emigration to England, when many Norman families crossed the English Channel and became the ruling families of England.

A book, "The Battle Abbey Roll," published in London in 1889, which gives the list of those who were with William the Conqueror at the battle of Hastings, mentions the Corbin name four times. The book states that on the settlement of England by the followers of William, the Corbins were undertenants until about the year 1154-6, when they became possessed of large estates through marriage, and had at least three coats-of-arms.

The Corbins were of Normandy prior to the eleventh century. There are many Corbins in France today. This may have given rise to the theory held by some that the American Corbins are of Huguenot origin. A branch of the Corbins from Normandy settled on the Isle of Guernsey, one of the Channel Islands, belonging to Great Britain. This branch had a coat-of-arms, described in Burke's "General Armory" as follows: "Argent [white] on a chief or [gold], three ravens sable," etc. Motto, "Deus pascit corvos." (God feeds the ravens.)

The exact date of the settlement of a Corbin in England is not known, but the earliest record now existing shows that Robert Corbin of Normandy was in Staffordshire, England, in 1180 and in 1195. Geoffrey Corbin is also mentioned in 1194, and Walter Corbin in 1272.

(See the "History of Staffordshire," by Shaw, II, p. 230.)

One of the branches of the Staffordshire Corbins settled in Warwickshire later. A MSS. left by Camden Clarenceux, King-at-Arms in 1612, mentions as follows: "The family of Corbin, whose ancient seat is Corbin's Hall, within Trinford Parish in Staffordshire, where most of them had their residence." The earliest settler in Warwickshire is given in Dugdale's "Visitation of Warwickshire," p. 1119, to wit: "Nicholas Corbin married Johanna Sturmie and by her inherited Hall End, in Whittington, in the time of King Richard III." A descendant of his, Richard, lived in the reign of King Henry VIII. Richard's son Thomas, who died in 1584, had a son George, who died in 1636. This George Corbin is mentioned also in MSS. of the King-at-Arms as being of the seventeenth generation in direct descent from Robert Corbin of Normandy. To him was confirmed by the King-at-Arms the Corbin coat-of-arms. He married Maria Fount of Foston, and they had a son Thomas (18) born May 24, 1594, who died a young man in 1631, leaving three sons, Thomas (19), born 1624, Henry, and George. The coat-of-arms confirmed to George Corbin by the College of Heraldry, London, about 1600, is given by Burke as follows: "Sable, on a chief or, three ravens proper." (Black, on a chief of gold, three ravens proper.)

The older main branch of the Corbins in Staffordshire bore the same arms, except that the lower part of the shield was silver instead of black. Most of the Corbins of England use the latter style, with the silver shield; and the crest of the Staffordshire Corbins is given by Burke as: "A dexter hand proper, holding a cross pattee fitchee, azure."

THE CORBINS OF VIRGINIA.

Several Corbins seem to have emigrated from England and settled in Virginia and Maryland. The most prominent of these was Henry Corbin, who was born in Warwickshire, England, in 1629. He was son (?) of Thomas Corbin, sixteenth in descent from Robert Corbin the Norman. Henry Corbin came to Virginia in 1654, and settled finally on a tract of land called Peckatone, in the parish of Strathon Major in Westmoreland County, where he built a fine brick mansion, which stood until destroyed by fire a few years ago. Henry Corbin was prominent in the colony of Virginia. His son, Garvin Corbin, became president of the Council of Virginia. Garvin's son, Richard Corbin, used his influence to procure Washington a commission as lieutenant in 1752. This family of Corbins intermarried with the Lees and other prominent families of old Virginia. (See Bishop Meade's "Old Churches of Virginia.") Other Corbins lived in Northampton and Accomac counties.

The Henry Corbin family had a coat-of-arms as follows: Sable on a chief or, three ravens proper. Motto, "Probitas Verus Honos." (Honesty is True Honor.)

EARLY CORBINS IN NEW ENGLAND.

The earliest mention of a Corbin in New England is of a John Corbin, who was master of a fishing ship, and carried a letter from William Holton at Piscataqua to John Winthrop at Agawam, April 18, 1633.

(N. E. Hist. and Gen. Register, Vol. 31, p. 180.)

The next Corbin mentioned is Robert Corbin. In Winthrop's "History of New England," Vol. II, p. 348, we read: "Richard Knight of Weymouth undertook for Robert Corbin, Master of the Speedwell, to appear at the next court to answer the action of Edward Wyatt and to abide the order of the court." This was June 15, 1637. Robert Corbin married Lydia, daughter of Richard Martin; no issue. (Savage's Gen. Dict.) On May 20, 1658, he received a grant of land at Casco Bay. (4 Records of Mass., p. 357.) He settled at Casco Bay, now Maine, and on October 19, 1658, signed a statement, acknowledging himself subject to Massachusetts. He was killed there, as stated in Hubbard's "Indian Wars," Vol. II, pp. 138, 143, 144: "On the morning of August 11, 1676, a party of Indians began their attack on Casco Bay. One picket, not knowing this, went up in a canoe towards Robert Corbin's house. After a little while he heard guns shot off. He came back. The Indians appeared on the shore. The Indians, passing from Anthony Bocket's to Corbin's, killed Corbin himself. Corbin's wife, with one of the other men's wives and the children of another of them, they carried off."

This Robert Corbin was a cousin of Clement Corbin, as is shown by the York Deeds, Vol. VIII, Folio 166, where Clement Corbin proved by John Phillips and Jabez Buckminster, August 28, 1681, that he was a cousin of Robert Corbin. James Corbin, son of Clement, sold "the residence of his kinsman, Robert Corbin," at Casco, to John Rogers of Boston, October 20, 1698; the deed was acknowledged October 24th of the same year. James was styled "mason," of Woodstock, County of Suffolk, Province of Massachusetts Bay.

A Robert Corbin of Weymouth, Mass., was a soldier in King Philip's war in 1675. This was probably not the same as the above, but may have been the Robert, "master of the Speedwell."

Letter from John Corbin of Upway, Dorsetshire, England, to Ralph Sprague of Charlestown, Mass., his son-in-law: (From the N. E. Gen. Register, Vol. IV, p. 289.)

"Deare and loving sonne; —

Ralfe Sprague my true love evermore remembered unto you, hoping in the Lord of your good health, as God bee praised I am and all the rest of our friends att the writing hereof. Loving sonne, I do entreat you very earnestly that so soon as you have receaved this letter you would not fayle to write unto mee your mynde about the tenement of yours in Upway being now in the possession of Thomas Murrie. Also I am very sorrie to understand that my brother-in-law John Holland should report that he receaved a letter from your brother Richard that you were dead but I give God praise that I heare to the contrary. I pray you to remember my love to your brother Richard Sprague and William Sprague. Also all our loving friends in generall have remembered their loving and kinde commendations unto you. And you may assure yoursealfe that I and all the rest of your loving friends would bee very glad to see you heare with us before wee die, and you shall bee kindly welcome to us. I pray you, loving sonne, not to fayle to send me answer of this letter as soon as you can conveniently. And so I leave you with my prayers to the heavenly protexion of the Almighty who in his mercy blesse preserve and keep you and so I rest

Yr loving father in law till Death

JOHN CORBIN.

Upway, March 25th, 1651."

This Ralph Sprague married Joan, daughter of John Corbin, writer of this letter, and came to America in 1628-9. She married, 2d, Edward Converse.

FIRST GENERATION.

CLEMENT CORBIN.

1. CLEMENT CORBIN, the ancestor of a numerous posterity in America, was born in England in 1626. His exact birthplace is not known, nor his connection with the Corbins in England who descended from the Norman emigrants. The most reliable family tradition states that he was "from the west of England, called a Welchman." (This was the record of Rev. Laban Ainsworth [Mary Ainsworth, Mary Marcy, James, Clement] and was furnished by Mr. Francis J. Parker of Boston.) A man of the same name settled in the Barbadoes, where he was an inhabitant and a landholder in 1638. Nor are the names of Clement Corbin's parents known definitely.

In an ancestral chart the late Ernest A. Corbin gave as the parents of Clement Corbin, "John and Margaret Corbin." I have not been able to find his authority for this, but it seems probable, as both names were common in the family later. In almost all branches of the family there is a tradition that two, sometimes three, brothers came over from England. One tradition gives these as Philip and John. It is possible that one of the Johns mentioned above, under "Early Corbins in New England," may have been the father of Clement.

There is a strong tradition in several branches of the family that the Corbins were of French Huguenot origin. This is entirely possible, as there were and still are many Corbins in France. The Huguenots were especially persecuted in France from about 1560 to 1572, when the Massacre of St. Bartholomew took place. From 1598 to 1685 they were protected to some extent by the Edict of Nantes, after which a great emigration took place to England and America. Clement Corbin's parents or grandparents may have fled from the earlier persecution. If this is the case they belonged to a class which included some of the best people of France.

Clement Corbin is said to have come to America in 1637.* At this time Clement would have been only eleven years old. Hence, if he came then, he must have had some older relative with him, probably his cousin Robert, or possibly his parents, as there were other Corbins in eastern Massachusetts at an early date. But it seems more probable to the writer that he came over some time between 1640 and 1650, during the great period of Puritan emigration to New England. This class included some of the best people of England, who crossed the seas for the sake of religious liberty, and who made New England, and to a considerable extent the whole country, what it has been.

Clement Corbin was married to Dorcas Buckminster (or Buckmaster) March 7, 1655, by Capt. Humphrey Atherton. She was the daughter of Thomas and Joanna Buckmaster and was born in 1629. (The name Buckminster is found in the records of all of the first and second generations.) Thomas Buckminster was born in Wales, as was also his wife, Joanna. He was here in 1640, and was made a freeman May 6, 1646. He died at Muddy River September 30, 1656. His widow, Joanna, married Edward Garfield September 1, 1661, and died in 1676.

The children of Thomas and Joanna Buckminster were Dorcas, Zackery, Elizabeth (m. Spowell), Mary (m. Stevens), Thomas, Joseph, and Jabesh, or Jabez.

He made the following will, dated September (or July) 2, 1656, and recorded in Vol. VI of the Suffolk County Probate Records.

"2 of ye 7th month, 1656. I Thomas Buckmaster of Muddy River, being now sick & in my owne apprehension neare ye day of my death, yet being in my perfect sences, doe make this my last will.

I give to my son Zachery forty shillings, to my daughter Elizabeth Spowell, daughter Mary Stevens, daughter Dorcas Corben fourty shillings each. To my son Thomas, son Joseph, son Jabesh fourty shillings (each to be paid when severally one and twenty years of age). To my daughter Spowell's ten children, twenty shillings, to be put into ye deacon's hands to be improved for ye Children's learning. Unto my daughter Stephens' two children, twenty shillings, daughter Corben's children ten shillings, to my son Zachery's child ten shillings. — wife Joanna, Executrix, giving unto her all my lands and goods. It is my will that my two youngest sons, Joseph and Jabesh dwell with my wife and faithfully serve her till they be one and twenty years of age, but if my wife shall marry before they come to ye age, they shall be free. I give to my daughter Sarah forty shillings, to be paid at her day of marriage, or at ye age of one and twenty years; this was forgotten to be set in place with ye rest; this is my will.

JNO. WINCHESTER

JNO. LAWRENCE.

John Winchester deposed before ye magistrate 23 Nov. 1656, yt he writ the paper which he also read to Thomas Buckmaster who declared it to be his last will.

EDWARD RAWSON, RECORDER "

The inventory of his estate, taken November 2, 1656, by Peter Oliver and Jno. Winchester, amounted to £112 16s. 6d.

In the fall of 1656 Clement Corbin bought 42 acres of land at Muddy River in Boston, as shown by the Suffolk Deeds, Boston, Vol. II, p. 303, from which the following is taken:

On Oct. 7, 1656 Jane Tare "now wife of Richard Tare, heretofore the widow of Jno. Parker late of Boston, together with Thomas Parker his sonne," upon payment of £10 by Clement Corbin, sold him "that parcel of Land commonly known by the Eighth Lott Scituated Att Muddy River, being forty-two acres more or less."

This Muddy River, where he lived, is now Brookline. It joined Roxbury, and there Clement Corbin and family worshiped in the old First Church, of which John Eliot, the "Apostle to the Indians," was the pastor. Clement Corbin gave £1 10s. towards building the first meeting-house at Roxbury. Clement Corbin also bought land at Muddy River in 1663. There is a record in the Suffolk Deeds, I, p. 32, that "Clement Corbin took up a stray hieffer Dec. 16, 1664." In 1687 he was taxed at Muddy River 4s. and 6d. on 19 acres of land, 6 head of cattle, 1 colt, 10 sheep, 2 swine, and 2 housing. (Brookline Records.)

His name appears on the tax lists at Muddy River as late as December 31, 1691, but it is not certain that he was still living there at that time, as he may have gone to Woodstock but still retained property at his former home.

In 1686 the people of Roxbury started the settlement of "New Roxbury," now Woodstock, Conn., the story of which is interestingly told in Miss Larned's "History of Windham County, Conn." "The Roxbury people were the best that came from England," and filled many of the highest offices in the colonial government. About this time they found themselves straitened for room, and so sent out a colony to found the new settlement. Among the original settlers and proprietors to go to Woodstock in 1686 was James Corbin, son of Clement, then a young man twenty-one years of age and unmarried. His father was then sixty years of age. Hence it seems that the young man came as a pioneer to prepare the way for the coming of the rest of the family. James Corbin drew home lot No. 2, situated on the west side of Plaine Hill (now Woodstock Hill) and containing 20 acres. It seems probable that Clement Corbin and family came to Woodstock the next year, 1687, for at a town meeting held at Woodstock, January 7, 1688, there "was granted to Clem<sup>t</sup> Corbin a 20 acre lott wth all Rights provided he pay al charges past present and to come, according to his proportion." This was home lot No. 43, "which he had before possessed," situated on the northwest side of the highway to Muddy Brook. Jabez Corbin also received a home lot, No. 48, near his father's. Clement Corbin is spoken of as from Brookline, Mass. He was one of the four persons, not from Roxbury, to whom lots were assigned.

The children of Clement and Dorcas Corbin were all born at Muddy River. The first three were baptized at the First Church, Boston, April 6, 1662. The baptism of the last four (Jabez, Dorcas, Joanna, and Margaret) was recorded in the Church Records of Roxbury by Rev. John Eliot, the missionary to the Indians, but at that time pastor of the Roxbury church.

- vii. JOANNA, bapt. Feb. 9, 1672-3; also called Hannah; d. Oct. 6, 1686.
7. viii. MARGARET, bapt. March 21, 1675-6.

(Eliot's records are given in the old style of chronology, and hence they are confusing to one not versed in it. The months were numbered differently than at present, i. e., September was the 7th, October the 8th, November the 9th, December the 10th, January the 11th, and February the 12th; then March was the 1st, and so on. But the old year was supposed to continue through the months of January, February, and to March 25th, which accounts for the double dates given in connection with those months. Until 1752 the year began on Annunciation Day, March 25th, which was old style, but after that on Jan. 1st, the new style. Hence when double dates are given, to make it the modern style the last year should be read. Eliot's records of baptisms are:

- "1667 Moneth 12, day 23 Jabesh son to ——— Corbin.
- 1670 Moneth 9, day 13, Dorcas dau. to ——— Corbin.
- 1672 Moneth 12 day 9, Joanna dau. to ——— Corbin.
- 1675 Moneth 1 day 21, Margret dau. to Clement Corbin."

Eliot also records the death of a Margaret Corbin "Moneth 7 day 24, 1675," which would be Sept. 24, 1675; hence it seems that there was another child, Margaret, who died young and from whom the other Margaret, born the following March, was named.)

Clement Corbin died at Woodstock August 1, 1696. His wife, Dorcas, died there Jan. 21, 1722 (town records) or Jan. 22, 1721 (tombstone) aged 92. Both are buried in the old cemetery at Woodstock Hill, near the southwest corner. Their son, Lieut. Jabez Corbin, is also buried near and has a stone. These stones were renovated about 1897 by Love Brothers at Webster, Mass., through the thoughtfulness and generosity of Mrs. Caroline Fairfield Corbin of Chicago. While they were at the marble works at Webster a photograph was taken, which is here shown.

The following deed of Clement Corbin to his son Jabez is self-explanatory.

"To all Christian People to whom these Presents shall come Clement Corbin of Woodstock in the County of Suffolk within the Collony of Massachusetts Bay in New England & Dorcas his wife sendeth greeting: Know ye that I Clement Corbin, in consideration of my parental love and fatherly affection to my well beloved son Jabez Corbin of Woodstock aforesaid and a considerable yearly sum to me secured in the law and to Dorcas my well beloved wife for which cause and considerations me thereunto moving and with which as with a valuable sum, I the said Clement Corbin for myself, my heirs," etc. —

"All that my messuage (?) or tenement of housing and land containing a dwelling house and barn and the land adjoining, being a twenty acre home lott, with all rights and privileges in all after division either of upland or meadow or swamp divided or undivided, lying or being within ye town of Woodstock aforesd. The homelott being bounded on the highway easterly and on the common

Last will and testament of Clement Corbin: (From the Suffolk County Probate Records, Boston, Vol. XI, p. 207, and Vol. XV, p. 333.)

"In the name of God, Amen. The sixth day of February, 1695-6, I, Clement Corbin of Woodstock in the County of Suffolk in the Province of Massachusetts Bay in New England, Husbandman, being through mercy in good mature health and of sound disposing mind and memory, yet knowing the uncertainty of the present life, and being desirous that peace and love may be kept and maintained in my Family after I am gone the way of all Flesh. Do therefore settle and dispose of my temporal Goods and Estate by this my last Will and Testament in manner as therein is hereafter expressed.

Imprimis. I will that all my just debts and necessary charges for my interment be well and truly paid and discharged with all conveniency.

Item, and forasmuch as I have already settled my two sons (namely) James and Jabez Corbin, the said James upon my Land at Muddy River, and the said Jabez upon my Living at Woodstock, whereby I have given out comfortable portions of my Estate to them, for and under such conditions and Reservations as I have made with each of them, my son James standing obliged to pay the sum of Four score pounds unto whom I shall see good to order, the same at and before the end and Expiration of three years next after mine and my Wives deceased.

I do give and bequeath the said Four score pounds in manner following.

That is to say Forty pounds thereof unto my daughter Mary Gardner and her heirs, and the other Forty pounds to my Daughter Margaret Davis and her heirs, the said sum to be paid in the same species as is expressed in his obligation.

2. THOMAS CORBIN (Clement), b. 1656 at Muddy River, was a sailor. He was captured by the Algerine pirates and redeemed by money given, at least in part, by his father. He is mentioned in his father's will in the following terms: "I give and bequeath unto my eldest son, Thomas Corbin, if he be yet living and return home, and to his heirs, three hundred acres of land lying at Mussamuggatick in the Nipmug country, which, with what I have advanced and disbursed for his redemption out of captivity, will make up his portion of my estate." As to this captivity a memorandum left by the Rev. Laban Ainsworth (1747-1858) says that Thomas Corbin was for eighteen years a captive in Turkey, was redeemed with a large sum, and was afterward married in England.

This tradition, except as to the length of captivity, is confirmed by a statement in the N. E. Hist. and Gen. Register, Vol. 38, p. 385, where is given a list of American captives redeemed in Algiers by the agent of Mr. William Borotill of London, merchant, at £40 each. It seems that some of the money was paid by the English government from a fund of £20,000 created in 1680. The name of Thomas Corbin of New England, of the ship "Blessing," is given in the list. The date in the statement is 1681, probably that of the redemption.

From the statement in his father's will, it seems that after his redemption he again went to sea, and his whereabouts was unknown in 1696. From the following letters of administration it appears that he died before 1704, leaving a wife and children in England.

Letters of administration granted to Ellis Callender on the estate of Thomas Corbin, late of Boston, deceased:

"Thomas Corbin, late of Boston, aforesaid, mariner, some time since died Intestate, having Goods, Chattels, Rights or Credits in the County aforesaid; whereby the power of committing administration and full disposition of all and singular the Goods, Chattels, Rights and Credits of the said deceased and also the having, Examining and allowing the accounts of such examination doth appertain unto me, &c. &c. on behalf of the minor children now (in England) full power to administer all and singular the Goods, Chattels, &c. &c. of Thomas Corbin, or in other words to settle up the estate.

Dated at Boston, Sept. 12, 1704.

Give an account of his settlement by Dec. 13, 1704, and to render a full settlement by Sept. 13, 1705."

3. MARY CORBIN (Clement), b. about 1658; m. Joseph Gardner, 1681. He was the son of Peter Gardner, who d. previous to June 10, 1699, and whose estate was administered by Samuel Aspinwall, June, 1722; his other children, besides Joseph, were Benjamin; Sarah, m. John Gore; Rebecca, m. Moses Craft; Peter, Jr., m. Margaret ———, Jan. 17, 1712-3.

Children:

- i. ELIPHALET GARDNER.
- ii. REBECCA GARDNER, m. ——— Carpenter.

4. JOHN CORBIN (Clement), b. about 1660, was named in 1674 "with his father" in a list of the inhabitants of Muddy River. He was a soldier in Capt. Johnson's company in King Philip's War in 1675. (See under "Corbins in the Wars.") Although only about fifteen years of age, he was a member of the Roxbury militia, being in Capt. Isaac Johnson's company, the 4th; of the Massachusetts regiment organized for the war against the Narragansett Indians.

Capt. Johnson reported to the Council in Boston in 1675 that the committee had taken "veiuew of there Armes and Amunision and cloathing: — sum of them had sum damage in there musquets — which we doe intreat sum order may be taken that they may be mended by sum warrant from Authoritee: privat indeavors having been hitherto unsecsesefull: one or two spack of sum want of convenient cloathing: which we humbly leave To the consideration of Authoritee."

In the attack on the great swamp fort Dec. 19, 1675, Capt. Johnson's company was at the front. Capt. Johnson was killed at the beginning of the fight, three others were killed and eight wounded.

State House Records, Boston, Vol. LXVIII, p. 75.

N. E. Hist. and Gen. Register, Jan., 1886.

Only a meager record of John Corbin's life has come down to us. He married and had at least one child, Hannah or Joanna, who married Nathaniel Sessions March 2, 1706-7, at Woodstock, by Rev. Josiah Dwight. This Nathaniel Sessions was born in Andover, Mass., August 8, 1681, and after his marriage settled in Pomfret, Conn., and became the ancestor of numerous descendants. (For these see the "Sessions Genealogy," also the compiler's "History of Union, Conn." This Nathaniel Sessions afterwards received land in Greenwich, Mass., on account of the services of his father-in-law, John Corbin, in King Philip's War.

The Rev. Laban Ainsworth (a descendant of Mary, Mary, James, Clement) stated that John Corbin went to England with his brother Thomas and died there.

5. JAMES CORBIN (Clement), b. March 31, 1665, at Muddy River (now Brookline, Mass.), m. Hannah Eastman, April 7 (or 27), 1697, by Rev. Josiah Dwight, at Woodstock. She was the dau. of Philip and Mary (Barnard Morse) Eastman, and was b. Nov. 5, 1679, in Haverhill, Mass.

Philip Eastman was the son of Roger, the first comer and progenitor of the Eastman family in America, who was b. in Wales in 1611, and d. in Salisbury, Mass., Dec. 16, 1694. He m. Sarah Smith (?), b. 1621, and d. March 11, 1697, in Salisbury. He sailed from Southampton, April, 1638, in the ship Confidence for the Massachusetts Bay Colony. He received lands in Salisbury 1640-3. His third son, Philip, b. Oct. 20, 1644, in Salisbury, m. for his second wife Mary (Barnard) Morse, Aug. 22, 1678. She was b. Sept. 22, 1645, being the dau. of Thomas and Alenor Barnard of Newburyport, and was the widow of Anthony Morse. Philip Eastman was a soldier in King Philip's War. He lived in Haverhill, where his house was burned by the Indians March 15, 1697, and he and some of his family were captured and dispersed. After his escape he settled in Woodstock, Conn. He d. before 1714.

(See Eastman Genealogy, compiled by Guy S. Rix of Concord, N. H.)

James Corbin was one of the first settlers of "New Roxbury," now Woodstock, Conn. He was one of the "second goers" from Roxbury to Woodstock, and was one of the first thirty proprietors in the division of land, April 6, 1686. He then received "Home Lot No. 2," consisting of twenty acres and lying on the west side of "Plaine Hill," now Woodstock Hill. (See Miss Larned's "History of Windham County, Conn.") In 1690 he drew Lot No. 32. At that time a lot was also given to his brother Jabez, beside his own, and also one to their father, Clement Corbin. In the records James is called a "brick layer." In 1693 Woodstock first "attained the conveniency of a shop," twelve rods of land being allowed to Jabez Corbin for the purpose. James Corbin and his brother Jabez were the first traders in the colony. Their shop on "Plaine Hill" soon became the center of much traffic. They dealt largely in furs, collected turpentine from the neighboring forests, and took in the surplus produce of the planters, taking them to Boston and exchanging them for "liquor, ammunition, and other necessities." James Corbin's "cart" was one of the institutions of Woodstock, its chief avenue of communication with the outer world, and its owner was a person of no small influence and consideration. In 1700 Indian troubles arose in Woodstock, and James Corbin's cart was on the road from Boston and in great danger of interception and capture by the enemy. But on the following Sunday news came that the cart was approaching, and sixty men with arms went out to meet it, and brought it in with great rejoicing. In 1700, also, James Corbin was desired not to dispose of any ammunition to any Indian but with the approbation of Capt. Sabin or Rev. Mr. Dwight.

About 1705 a large part of the township of Ashford was purchased by James Corbin, who supplied the new settlers with necessaries and collected such quantities of furs that "he had much ado to get them conveyed to the great street in Boston," his cart, drawn by four oxen and four horses, often breaking down on the rough road between Woodstock and Mendon.

In 1694 a square piece of land in front of James Corbin's, containing four or five acres, was sequestered for a training place and burial ground, and still forms a part of Woodstock's pleasant Common. Also a piece of land between Jabez Corbin's and the highway was set apart for a school. In 1721 a new house of worship was completed, or nearly so, and sixteen persons were allowed to build pews around the walls. Among these were James Corbin and Jabez Corbin.

James Corbin removed to Dudley, Mass., the town just north of Woodstock, and about seven miles distant from his former home, about the year 1724. Dudley (first called Kekamoochaug) was incorporated Jan. 1, 1732. James Corbin was one of the first selectmen that year. He was moderator of the town meeting in 1732, 1733, 1734, and 1735. In 1732 he was appointed, with his son Clement, to lay out highways, and in 1733 to "run the Line round our township." In 1732 he was on a committee to arrange for the settlement of the first pastor at Dudley. In 1734 he was on a committee "to privid preaching for the town for the year insuing and also to privid a place to board the minister at." Also to see about "some land we hope to obtain of the indians for our meeting-house and burying-place and training-field and also fifty acurs adjoining for a pasnaig" (parsonage). He is said to have given to Dudley the land for the burying-ground. He died in Dudley August 11, 1736, and was buried in the old cemetery there. The inscription on his gravestone, which is now well-nigh illegible, reads: "In memory of Mr. James Corbin, who died August 11, 1736, aged 74 years." If his age is here rightly given, he was born in 1662 instead of 1665.

His wife, Hannah Corbin, died July 15, 1752, at the house of her son Samuel, aged 73. The Dudley Probate Records show that on August 14, 1752, Samuel Corbin was appointed administrator on the estate of his late mother. An inventory of "household effects and cloathing" amounted to £5 11s. 11d.

On Nov. 22, 1729, Clement Corbin and James Corbin, Jr., sold to John Chandler of Woodstock a lot in Kakamowachaug (Dudley), also the home lot granted "to their honored father, James Corbin, situated in Woodstock near the meeting-house, containing by estimation 20 acres, also a mansion house, barn and mantthouse."

For many years after James Corbin's death there was much controversy over the ownership of the large tract of land in Ashford to which he had a claim. In May, 1774, a petition was presented to the Connecticut Legislature by "Benjamin Marcy, Asahel Marcy, and Mary Marcy, widow, all of Woodstock in Windham County, and Dorcas Barnes of Plymouth, Mass., as they are the only descendants from the legal representatives of James Corbin, late of Dudley," showing that, in June, 1708, James Corbin, then of Woodstock, purchased of Major James Fitch of Canterbury 21,400 acres of land in Ashford and made many sales therefrom; encroachments were made on this tract, but the General Assembly in 1719 confirmed it to said Corbin. Notwithstanding, the inhabitants and settlers of Ashford kept encroaching on this land. So the petitioners asked liberty to take up 910 acres of the undivided land, and also to hold 1,375 acres within the patent granted to said Corbin.

(Col. Records of Conn., XIV, p. 282. See also the Records for 1717-1725, where a patent of 2,476 acres was granted to James Corbin.)

In judging of the character of James Corbin we may conclude that he was a man of tremendous energy and great ability. This is shown by his leaving Muddy River at the age of 21 to settle in the wilderness now Woodstock, by his becoming the trader for the new settlement and running his cart with great difficulty to Boston, by his acquiring a large part of the township of Ashford, and, finally, as if longing for "new worlds to conquer," when about 60 years of age, by his leaving the town of Woodstock (where perhaps life had become too easy and comfortable) to again settle in the wilderness and help form the present town of Dudley. His prominent position there and the esteem in which he was held are shown by the offices to which his fellow-townsmen elected him. Such were the men that subdued the American wilderness and laid the foundations for our nation.

Children (all born in Woodstock) :

9. ii. MARY, b. Feb. 5, 1700.
10. iii. JAMES, b. Feb. 24, 1702.

- v. HANNAH, b. March 24, 1706; d. young.
11. vi. PHILIP, b. Jan. 5, 1708.
- vii. STEPHEN, b. Aug. 5, 1710 (Wd. Town Rec.), or Nov. 19, 1710 (Family Record); d. unm.
12. viii. ELISHA, b. June 30, 1713.
13. ix. SAMUEL, b. July 10, 1715.
- x. HANNAH, b. Sept. 6, 1717; d. Dec. 15, 1718.
- xi. HANNAH or JOANNA, b. Aug. 26, 1721; m. Benjamin Coburn of Dudley, Sept. 26, 1746.

All these dates are from the Woodstock town records, except that of the birth of Samuel, which was doubtless omitted by negligence. That he was the son of James and Hannah is proved by the Dudley Probate Records, which speak of her death at his house and his being appointed her administrator.

The Woodstock records also give the death of an Elisha Corbin, Sept. 23, 1716. But Elisha Corbin lived, was active for many years, and left numerous descendants. Most likely the name is a mistake for Hannah, the fifth child, who died young. Some persons give a Hannah, b. Dec. 15, 1718, but that is a mistake from misreading the town records "born," instead of "died."

6. LIEUT. JABEZ CORBIN (Clement), bapt. Feb. 23, 1668; m. Mary Morse in 1692. She was b. Aug. 31, 1672, and was the dau. of Lieut. Anthony and Mary (Barnard) Morse of Newbury, Mass.

Lieut. Anthony Morse, b. 1638, was the son of Anthony and Mary Morse, and was twice married. He had a large family, and d. Feb.

25, 1716-7. His second wife, Mary Barnard, b. in Salisbury, Mass., Sept. 22, 1645, m. Anthony Morse Nov. 11, 1669, and lived in Newbury, Mass. He d. and she m. 2d, Philip Eastman, Aug. 22, 1678, and lived in Haverhill and afterwards in Woodstock (see under James Corbin who m. Hannah Eastman, dau. of Philip and Mary and half-sister to the wife of Jabez Corbin). The father of Mary Barnard was Thomas Barnard of Salisbury, who was killed by the Indians at Amesbury before 1667. He m. Eleanor — before 1645; she m. 2d, George Little of Newbury, July 19, 1681, and was living Nov. 27, 1694. Anthony Morse, Sr., b. at Marlboro, Wiltshire, England, May 9, 1606, emigrated to America in 1635, settled at Newburg, and d. there Oct. 12, 1686. He was a man of influence and high standing. (See the Morse Genealogy.)

Lieut. Jabez Corbin settled in Woodstock about 1688, where his home lot was No. 48. He was an active citizen of Woodstock and a partner of his brother James in store-keeping. His occupation is given in deeds as that of "a merchant and weaver." He sold land in Quinntisset, now Thompson, in 1711, which was said to have been "much infested with bears, wolves and Indians," and where a log fort was necessary for the protection of the settlers.

In 1693 he was allowed twelve square rods of land for a shop. In 1726 he sold a large tract of land in Thompson to John Dwight. In 1721 he was granted liberty to build a pew, and in 1722 had the fifth choice of pews in the new meeting-house.

Jabez Corbin was constable of the town of Woodstock in 1725. His wife, Mary, d. Jan. 8 (or 13, T. R.), 1727-8. It seems that he married again, for the Woodstock Town Records give "Jabez Corbin and Mary Edmunds of Woodstock were married July 5, 1728." He made his will April 24, 1736, making his son Robert his executor. This will was probated Nov. 16, 1736. He d. Oct. 23, 1736, and was buried in the old cemetery at Woodstock hill, where a rude gravestone still stands, on which the name only is now legible.

11. PHILIP CORBIN (James, Clement), b. Jan. 5, 1708; m. Dorothy Barstow of Thompson, Jan. 13, 1731. (This name is variously spelled Barto, Bestaw, Baister. There seemed to be a good deal of perplexity about it. The Woodstock Town Records give, "Philip Corbin of Keka-moochaug [Dudley] and Dorothy Bestaw of Thompson were married Jan. 13, 1730-1, by me, Amos Throop.")

Philip Corbin bought land Feb. 13, 1730, at "Keeka-moochaug," of William Dudley, adjoining the land of Clement Corbin. March 31, 1776, Joseph Peffer of Dudley ceded to Clement, James, and Philip Corbin one acre of ground for a burying-ground. Philip Corbin was one of the prominent early citizens of Dudley and held the following offices, as given in the Dudley Town Records: Fence viewer, 1734, 1741, 1766; highway surveyor, 1739, 1750, 1754, 1771; tything man, 1740, 1741, 1765; constable, east side, 1745; committee on schools, 1757-1760, 1766; committee to seat meeting-house, 1756; committee to repair meeting-house, 1768. He made his will in 1774, and the same year conveyed to his son Jedediah a part of his home farm, "said barn and said barnyard to be in common with said Philip and said Jedediah."

He lived at Dudley, where he held the following offices: Hog-reeve, 1747; constable for east side, 1749-1750; highway surveyor, 1753, 1764; fence-viewer, 1756, 1758, 1765; committee to seat meeting-house, "and the method to go by is age and estates," 1756; school committee, 1763, 1787; warden, 1765. In 1760 the town voted to allow him £9 10s. "for building a good stone pound, sd pound to be 3 foot and a half thick at bottom of said wall and about 18 or 20 inches thick at top and six foot and a half high, with a teer of good flatt stons on the wall above — to be two rod squar with a good gate well hanged, the town finding the irons." June 30, 1774, he was chosen as a member of the town "Committee of Correspondence," to correspond with such committees in other towns to prepare to resist British encroachments. Sept. 19, 1774, the town voted to add to its stock 100 lbs. of powder, 400 lbs. of lead, and 10 dozen flints. Elisha Corbin was on a committee for choosing militia officers. In 1780 he was on a committee to hire fourteen men for the Continental Army.

He d. Aug. 4, 1797, ae. 84.

16. LIEUT. JOHN CORBIN (Jabez, Clement), b. Dec. 11, 1698, at Woodstock; m. Martha Hosmer, dau. of James and Elizabeth Hosmer, April 3, 1728.

James Hosmer, the father of Martha, was b. Oct. 23, 1660, at Concord, Mass., and m. Elizabeth Sawyer, Feb. 16, 1687; she was b. Feb. 6, 1663, at Lancaster, Mass., and d. Jan. 15, 1745, at Woodstock. He probably lived in Lancaster for a time, afterwards settled in Worcester, and removed to Woodstock before 1710, where he became prominent. His father, James Hosmer, was b. in Concord, Mass., in 1637; m. Sarah White, Oct. 13, 1758; and was killed in the battle of Sudbury, April 21, 1676 (see N. E. Gen. Reg., Vol. 20, pp. 347, 348). Sarah White was the dau. of Capt. John White and sister of the famous Mrs. Rowlandson, who was taken prisoner in King Philip's War, and afterwards published a book on her hardships. Capt. John White of Salem, in 1638, went to Lancaster, and was one of the founders of that place, a leading man and the largest landholder. He was b. in England, and d. in 1655. His children were all prominent.

James Hosmer the first, father of the above, was b. in 1607, and m. Anna ———, who was b. in 1608. He came from London in the ship Elizabeth, in 1635. Their English home was in Hawkhurst, in Kent County. They brought with them two servants and two daughters: Mary, aged 2 years, and Ann, 3 months. He was one of the founders of Concord, and had b. there: James, 1637; John, 1639; and others. He was a freeman, May 17, 1637, and d. Feb. 7, 1685. He was a man of influence. Anna, his wife, d. May 11, 1641.

John Corbin lived in Thompson, Conn., which was then a part of Killingly, and about six miles east of his father's house in Woodstock. There he built the second house, which was located on the southern side of Thompson Hill, on the site of the present Chandler residence. In May, 1753, he was commissioned by the General Assembly ensign, and, in October of the same year, lieutenant of the South Company or Train Band in the town of Killingly. (Col. Records of Conn.) In 1760 he was a highway surveyor for Killingly. He d. and, with his wife, was buried at Thompson.

17. BENJAMIN CORBIN (Jabez, Clement), b. May 23, 1704; m. Jemima Cutler April 19, 1731 (by Rev. Amos Throop). On July 16, 1725, Lieut. Jabez Corbin deeded to his son Benjamin "a parcell of land scituate in the south half of Woodstock, known by the name of the west division of land." About this time he settled in West Woodstock and became one of the founders of the Congregational church there. After many disputes and quarrels a site was fixed upon for the church building in 1747, and in 1749 Benjamin Corbin received permission to build a pew there. (See Miss Larned's History of Windham County.) He probably d. at Sturbridge, April 7, 1780.

19. ROBERT CORBIN (Jabez, Clement), b. May 24, 1710; m. Sarah Bliss, dau. of Samuel Bliss of Rehoboth, Mass., Nov. 29, 1739, at Woodstock. Robert Corbin was the executor of his father's will, made July 16, 1725, and admitted to probate in 1736. His first three children were baptized in Woodstock, so he must have lived there until 1748. He resided at Dighton, Mass., April 1, 1755, at which time he bought land of Benjamin Martin in Rehoboth on the Palmer River, where he went to live.

He was a member of Capt. Philip Walker's company in the French and Indian War in 1758, and was stationed at Half Moon. He was taken sick and died, probably, at Troy, N. Y. Sarah Corbin, his widow, was made administrator of his estate Oct. 4, 1758. The inventory of his property was taken Dec. 5, 1758, by Capt. Nathaniel Bliss, Capt. Wm. Bullock, and Daniel Bliss, and amounted to £257 2s. 4d. His three younger children were under fourteen in 1759, and their mother was made their guardian. Seth Knapp was guardian for Samuel, who was over fourteen in 1759. May 2, 1774, Samuel Bullock was guardian for Eliphalet, over fourteen. On Jan. 23, 1765, Samuel Bliss willed land to his grandchildren Robert, Samuel, and Eliphalet Corbin. Sarah, the wife of Robert Corbin, d. March, 1807, at Bainbridge, N. Y., ae. 84.

FOURTH GENERATION.

20. CAPT. CLEMENT CORBIN (Clement, James, Clement), b. May 1, 1733; m., 1st, Rachel Bacon, Nov. 18, 1753, at Dudley. He m., 2d, Mary Fillebrown ("Philly Brown"), July 12, 1770, at Thompson, Conn. (by Rev. Noadiah Russell). He bought land in Killingly (Thompson) of his father in 1757. He lived in the Thompson parish of Killingly in 1762, when he signed a petition with others for a school in the neighborhood. The petition was granted and District No. 11, known as "Capt. Corbin's District," was established. This district was situated northwest of a "great hill" between the Quinnebaug and the French rivers and adjoined the Massachusetts line. (Miss Larned's History of Windham County.)

He was probably a soldier in the Revolution, although, as his son Clement was also a soldier, it is difficult to determine from the records which one is referred to. But family tradition says that he was in the Revolution. He was probably sergeant in a company which went to Rhode Island in Sullivan's campaign in 1778. He became known as "Captain" afterwards, but how he obtained the title is unknown. When Thompson became a separate town from Killingly in 1785, Clement Corbin was one of those who took the freeman's oath. The births of the first nine children below (Rachel to Payson) are from the Killingly records, while those of the last five are recorded at Thompson. Tradition says that there were twenty-four children in this family, twelve by each wife. But, as seen below, only seventeen are recorded. But the names of Charles, John, David, Peggy, Daniel, Horace, and Eliakim have been handed down by tradition as also belonging to this family.

Soon after 1795 Clement Corbin removed with his family by his second wife to Bradford County, Pa. While living there he was kicked by a cow and his leg was so badly broken that it had to be amputated. He d. at Warren, Pa., in 1825, æ. 92. His funeral sermon was preached by Rev. Salmon King, and he was buried in the Presbyterian cemetery there. His widow d. March, 1837, æ. 86. She was very much attached to church, and in her later years, being afraid to ride, used to walk a mile and a half, with a cane in one hand and leaning on one of her grandchildren with the other.

About 1820 three grandchildren (by the first wife), Charles, Horace, and Ebenezer, came to Pennsylvania.

(Woodstock town record obliterated.)

23. ELIJAH CORBIN (Clement, James, Clement), b. Dec. 1, 1738; m. Elizabeth Prince Dec. 29, 1765, at Thompson, by Rev. Noadiah Russell; she was the dau. of Robert and Phebe (Symonds) Prince and was b. in Salem, Mass., about 1742. Her parents removed to Thompson in 1747. (See the Prince Genealogy.) They lived in Thompson, then a part of Killingly, where the births of the children are recorded. He d. before 1780, and his widow m. Moses Corbin (James, James, Clement).

Children:

- 62. i. ELIJAH, b. June 28, 1767.
- 63. ii. PARLEY, b. May 22, 1769.
- 64. iii. DANIEL, b. Sept. 22, 1771.
- iv. BETTY, b. May 31, 1774.

24. JAMES CORBIN (James, James, Clement), b. Jan. 18, 1736, at Dudley; m. Ann Tucker of Charlton, April 18, 1761; she was b. at Charlton, Mass., April 11, 1740, and d. at Newport, N. H., April 11, 1813. He was probably a soldier in the Revolution; his son James certainly was. There is a family tradition that he lost his leg in the Revolutionary War, but it might have been in the earlier war. He d. May 12, 1792, at Dudley, and was buried in the old cemetery there, where the inscription on his gravestone reads:

“Sacred to the memory of James Corbin, who died May 12, 1792, in his 58th year.

“Erected by Dr. James Corbin, 21 years after his father’s death.”

Children:

- 65. i. JAMES, b. Jan. 2, 1762.
- ii. POLLY, b. Feb. 17, 1764; m. Jacob Allen, Jr., of Sturbridge, Aug. 14, 1783.
- iii. EDWARD, b. Feb. 25, 1766; m. Eunice Kibbe (sister of Lois Kibbe, who m. James above), of Somers, Conn. He settled in Florence, Huron Co., Ohio; his descendants, if any, are untraced.
- iv. ANNE (or Anna), b. Nov. 23, 1768; m. Sabin Allen of Monson at Sturbridge, July 26, 1792.
- 66. v. SUSANNA, b. June 22, 1772.
- vi. ASA, b. Jan. 15, 1780; m. Lucy Jencks, Jan. 22, 1805; at Newport, N. H.; she d. there Jan. 4, 1806, as the following inscription on a tombstone there shows:
 “In memory of Mrs. Lucy Corbin, and a full-born child in her arms, wife of Mr. Asa Corbin and daughter of Jeremiah Jenckes, who died Jan. 4, 1806, aged 23 years.”

vii. RHODA, b. ———; m. John Ryan, Dec. 16, 1796, at Sturbridge; they settled in Ohio.

viii. PATTY; no record.

The Dudley town records also give Hannah (twin of James), b. Jan. 2, 1762, and Thomas, b. April 11, 1771; both probably d. in infancy.

25. MOSES CORBIN (James, James, Clement), b. Oct. 11, 1742, at Dudley; chose Eben Davidson for his guardian, April 29, 1760; m., 1st, Sarah Bacon, Nov. 8, 1769; m., 2d, widow Elizabeth Corbin (widow of Elijah) April 3, 1780, at Thompson (Town Rec.). He was a soldier in the Revolution, serving in the Lexington Alarm.

He sold his farm in Thompson to Mark Douge (or Donge) April 4, 1794.

He d. at Whitehall, N. Y., in 1824, æ. 82.

Children of 1st wife (b., probably, in Dudley):

- 67. i. MOSES, b. Jan. 17, 1772.
- ii. CENA or SENA.
- iii. SALLY.

Children of 2d wife (recorded at Thompson):

- 68. iv. ALPHEUS, b. Dec. 3, 1781.
- v. CHLOE, b. June 16, 1783.
- vi. POLLY, b. Dec. 14, 1786.

26. ASA CORBIN (James, James, Clement), b. May 15, 1746, at Dudley; Samuel Corbin was appointed his guardian, April 29, 1760. He m. Patience Smith Nov. 16, 1769, at Dudley. He was a soldier in the Revolution, his record being given by the Pension Bureau at Washington as follows: "Asa Corbin, aged 91 (?), residing at Nassau, N. Y., applied for a pension Aug. 9, 1832. He stated that he was born at Dudley, Mass., in May, 1741 (?), and there enlisted in the fall of 1775 under Capt. Nathaniel Healey, in Col. Ebenezer Learned's Mass. Regiment, and served two months as a private. In June, 1776, he again enlisted under Capt. Nichols, Col. Jonathan Holman's regiment, and served five months, participating in the battle of White Plains. Afterwards [date not stated] he served four and a half months under Capt. Healey and Col. Learned. His claim was allowed at $33.33 per annum, commencing March 4, 1831." Timothy and Joshua Corbin made affidavits that they served with him in 1776 and were in the battle of White Plains.

Asa Corbin gave a deed Feb. 17, 1794, in Worcester County, Mass. Family tradition says that he went to White Plains, Westchester County, N. Y., where he engaged in business as a tanner. But, as shown above, he resided at Nassau, Rensselaer County, N. Y., in 1832. No descendants are known.

27. TIMOTHY CORBIN (James, James, Clement), b. July 24, 1750; m. Abigail Vinton Oct. 20, 1774; she was the dau. of Joshua and Mary Vinton, and was b. Aug. 18, 1775, at Dudley, and d. there May 20, 1828. Timothy Corbin was a farmer and glazier at Dudley. He was a soldier in the Revolution (although owing to the incompleteness of the public records his name was not recorded). But his service is proved in several ways. Asa Corbin of Nassau, Rensselaer County, N. Y., made affidavit Feb. 9, 1831, before Justice James Hoag, that he, Timothy, and Joshua Corbin served together in Capt. Nichols' Company, Col. Holman's Regiment, Gen. Fellows' Brigade, the full term of five months, and that they fought in the battle of White Plains. This Asa Corbin was doubtless his brother. Timothy's grandson, Dr. J. V. Mansfield, who had personal recollection of him, stated that he was a soldier in the army and was at White Plains, N. Y., and also at New York at the time of the evacuation of the British. His granddaughter, Abigail Dodge Clemens, well remembers his telling her that he served in the Revolution. In the Pension Bureau at Washington is an affidavit of Timothy Corbin and Joshua Corbin, made at Dudley, Mass., Oct. 5, 1830, that they served with Asa Corbin as above.

He held several public offices in Dudley, being constable and collector most of the time from 1784 to 1791.

He d. Oct. 26, 1831, at Dudley.

Children:

- 75. viii. SUSAN, b. Aug. 12, 1797.

28. ELKANAH CORBIN (James, James, Clement), b. Oct. 23, 1752, at Dudley, Mass.; m. Hannah Harlow, granddau. of James Littlejohn and gr. granddau. of John Littlejohn, a passenger on the "Mayflower"; she was b. at Plymouth, Mass., March 25, 1750. They resided at first in Thompson parish, Killingly, Conn. He was a soldier in the Revolution, going to the Lexington Alarm from Connecticut, and afterwards enlisting in Capt. Jonathan Houghton's Company, Col. Smith's Mass. Regiment. The births of their first two children are recorded at Killingly. Soon after 1778 they removed to Charlestown, Montgomery County, N. Y., where he died.

Children:

29. MAJOR LEMUEL CORBIN (Philip, James, Clement), b. Feb. 19, 1740; m. Rebecca Davis of Oxford, Dec. 8, 1763, at Dudley; she was the dau. of Samuel and Mary Davis, and was b. at Oxford Jan. 10, 1736, and d. at Dudley April 3, 1820. Lemuel Corbin served actively in the Revolution, being in the Lexington Alarm for ten days, sergeant in Capt. Nath'l Healy's Company, Col. Holman's Regiment, in an alarm to Rhode Island, Dec., 1776, for twenty-one days; was commissioned lieutenant of Capt. Elias Pratt's Company, Col. Holman's Regiment (5th Worcester), Sept. 25, 1778; served also at several other times. (See "Mass. Soldiers and Sailors in the Revolution." Here the service of Lemuel Corbin and that of Samuel Corbin, both of Dudley, is given together. As they were both captains and their names were so similar, they were doubtless taken to be one and the same person. A letter from the adjutant-general shows, however, that most of this service belongs to Lemuel.) He became major of the militia after the Revolution, and was captain of the company from Dudley which marched to help suppress Shay's Rebellion. He was a prominent citizen of Dudley, where he held the following offices: Hog-reeve, 1766; east end constable, 1768; warden, 1770, 1781; highway surveyor, 1772, 1773, 1775, 1783, 1785; tything man, 1772; collector, 1775; revolutionary committee of correspondence, 1775, 1778, 1779, 1783, 1785; school committee, 1777; 1782, 1784; selectman, 1787. He was a revolutionary soldier, enlisting Jan. 2, 1781, for three years, — age 20, height 5 ft. 7 in., light complexion, — in Capt. Coburn's Company, Col. Grant's Regiment. He received a bounty. Family tradition says that he was one of the guards present at the hanging of Major André. He went to Wardsboro, Vt., where he resided in 1788. About 1817 he removed to Campbell, Steuben County, N. Y. He d. at Cooper's Plains, N. Y., Oct. 19, 1842. His wife d. Nov. 21, 1846, at Cooper's Plains. His grandson, Dr. G. E. Corbin of St. Johns, Mich., furnishes the following reminiscences:

"During my childhood my grandparents lived on a farm about a mile from my home at Campbell, N. Y. My first distinct recollection of my grandfather was on one occasion when I was five years old and was taken up in the night 'to go and see grandpa.' I stayed there two days and then was told that I had a little sister at home whom I had never seen. Soon after this I went to live in grandfather's family, as it was much nearer school. Two years later, in 1838, he was stricken with paralysis and was helpless until his death four years later. I often used to 'draw grandpa' in a rocking chair from his bed to the open fire, where as he sat, I often heard him tell incidents of his army life. This old soldier who had helped to win the liberties of America, received every care and attention possible in his last years."

In 1849, owing to failure of health, he went to Owego, and after living there for two years, went to Wisconsin, where he passed the rest of his life. His daughter, Mrs. Mary Turner, thus describes the journey:

"In 1851 father disposed of what loose property he had, left the farm to be sold, and started with his family, except Philip, Sophia, and Jacob, who had preceded them, for the then wild West. We took the N. Y. & Erie R. R. to Dunkirk and thence around the Great Lakes to Milwaukee. Then we rode for three days over prairie, through swamps, fording streams, until we came to Moscow, Iowa Co., a distance of 100 miles. Father, after a few months' rest, regained health and took up a farm of 160 acres in the town of Argyle, Lafayette Co., in a beautiful valley, later called Yankee Valley. Here were numerous wolves, wildcats, rattle-snakes and occasionally deer."

“Before the mill was completed the Civil War broke out and the Indians began making trouble on the frontier. People coming through from settlements west of us reported friends killed and families massacred. On the 18th of Aug. 1861 a horseman came riding up to the gate and called out, ‘Be ready to flee for the Indians are within fifteen miles of us and on the warpath.’ My husband had gone to church and left me alone with two little children, one not quite two years old and the other an infant two weeks old. My sister, Mrs. Britts, who lived in the other part of the house, helped pick up a few things for the children and we scrambled into a farm wagon and went out two miles where we found the people of the neighborhood gathered. Some of the women were so excited that they wore men's hats, some with nothing but slippers on their feet, others bareheaded and one had a bed blanket around her. One woman had three children on an ox wagon with a feather bed, half a barrell of beans and a pitchfork. My husband on his way to church heard the report and went out with other horsemen to ascertain the truth and found that the Indians were fifty instead of fifteen miles away. So we went home unmolested."

GROWING OLD.

You are growing old, they tell us,
     Every year;
 You are more alone, they tell us,
     Every year;
 You can win no new affection,
 You have only recollection,
 Deeper sorrow and dejection,
     Every year.

There come new cares and sorrows
     Every year;
 Darker days and darker sorrows
     Every year:
 The ghosts of dead loves haunt us.
 The ghosts of changed friends taunt us,
 And disappointments daunt us,
     Every year.

But the truer life draws nigher
     Every year,
 And its morning star climbs higher
     Every year;
 Earth's hold on us grows the slighter,
 And the heavy burden lighter,
 And the dawn immortal brighter,
     Every year.

All the clergymen of the town assisted, and there was a very large procession to the grave, which bore witness to the high esteem in which the young man was held. He was a youth of unusual promise, and the cutting off of such makes us realize the price that was paid for the preservation of our Union.

LINES ON THE BURIAL OF MARCUS M. CORBIN.

With solemn step and muffled drum
 We've borne him to his long, last home;
 And there, beneath the green pine's shade,
 Our pet, our drummer-boy, we've laid.

With throbbing hearts and bitter tears,
 "We yield the cherished hope of years";
 Our country called, and that to save,
 Our pet, our drummer-boy, we gave.

We miss the sparkle of that eye,
 That joyous heart that knew no sigh;
 We dream — but, ah, our dreams are vain —
 Our drummer-boy'll ne'er come again.

We'll strew with flowers that new-made grave,
 And with our tears their petals lave;
 We'll trust by faith that promise given,
 To meet our drummer-boy in Heaven.

And when with joyous hearts we greet
 Our absent friends, we'll not forget
 That mother, who, bereft of joy,
 Awaits in vain her drummer-boy.

O Thou, who hear'st the mourner's cry,
 Wilt Thou not hear that mother's sigh?
 And wilt not Thou some balm impart,
 To soothe and heal that bleeding heart?

His funeral was held at Webster, Sept. 24th, at which these lines, which were written for the occasion, were sung:

Soldier rest, thy warfare's ended —
 Clashing steel and cannon's roar,
 And the dirge-notes of the dying
 Can disturb thy sleep no more.
 Thou who, in thy country's peril,
 Firmly grasped thy sword in hand, —
 Fearless in the front of battle,
 Perished for thy fatherland.
 'Tis not kindred tear-drops only
 That will bathe thy grave like rain,
 For we all must pay a tribute
 O'er the youthful martyr slain.
 Then with reverence we will lay thee
 In the earth's cold bosom now,
 With thy country's banner o'er thee,
 And the laurel on thy brow.

She was b. at Sturbridge, Mass., Sept. 21, 1835. He was a private in Company A, 56th Mass. Vol. Infantry, First Brigade, First Division, 9th Army Corps, Army of the Potomac, in the Civil War, 1861-5. His army record is as follows:

He was present with his regiment in the following battles: Wilderness, May 6-8, 1864; here his colonel, Charles E. Griswold, was killed, and many others; Spottsylvania, May 10-18; North Anna River, May 24th; Bethesda Church, May 31st; Cold Harbor, June 3d; in front of Petersburg, in the assault of June 17th, and the subsequent siege operations. The regiment shared with the 9th corps in the action at "The Crater," July 30th, forming a part of the division selected to lead the advance immediately after the explosion of the mine, losing many as prisoners, in addition to those killed and wounded. It took part in the movement against the Weldon Railroad in August, sharing in the engagement of August 19th; was present at the battle of Peeble's Farm, or Poplar Spring Church, Sept. 30th, and participating in all the movements of the siege during the autumn. Monroe Corbin was honorably discharged for disability received in line of duty, Dec. 20, 1864. His regiment afterwards continued fighting in the Virginia campaign until Lee's surrender, after which it moved to Alexandria, and was mustered out July 12, 1865. With the rest of the 9th Corps, the 56th Regiment saw hard fighting, and lost 9 officers and 203 men, a gallant but frightful record.

Since his discharge from the army, Monroe Corbin has lived in Webster, Mass., where he was for many years in the employ of B. A. Corbin & Son in the manufacture of shoes. He is a well-known Grand Army man. He is much interested in the CORBIN GENEALOGY, and has patiently given the compiler much assistance in the preparation of this book.

REV. ALMON D. CORBYN,
1850.

Mass., he joined the class of 1838 of Yale, and was a member throughout the course. After graduation he was employed as a private tutor at Annapolis, Md. In the fall of 1839 he removed to St. Louis, Mo. In March, 1840, he was appointed professor of mathematics in Kemper College in that city, and in August was transferred to the professorship of Latin and Greek. In July, 1840, he was admitted to deacon's orders in the Episcopal Church, and in due time he was admitted to priest's orders. In 1844 he left the college and took charge of the infant parish of Christ's Church at Boonville, on the Missouri River, where he built a church and parsonage. In 1852 he left this place for the charge of St. Paul's parish in Columbus, Miss. A year or two afterwards he was invited to rectorship of St. Andrew's College, near Jackson, Miss. This charge he left in the spring of 1855 for that of the parish of St. Andrew in Jackson. In the following August the yellow fever broke out in the city, and while faithfully ministering to the sick and dying he took the disease. Having partially recovered, he too soon engaged in duty and had a relapse. He fell beneath the attack Oct. 18, 1855, aged 45 years. He was highly esteemed by his people as a theologian, a preacher, and a scholar.

221. REV. WILLIAM BESTON CORBYN, D.D. (Joseph P., William, Philip, James, Clement), b. June 1, 1814, at Woodstock, Conn.; m. 1st, Harriet N. Wright of Glastonbury, Conn., Aug. 13, 1841; she d. Jan. 21, 1843. He m. 2d, Mary Frances McDonald of Hannibal, Mo., July 11, 1855.

William B. Corbyn moved with his parents to Henrietta, Monroe Co., N. Y., where he attended the public schools and the Monroe Academy, and in 1832 entered Phillips Academy at Andover, Mass. He entered Yale College in 1835 and graduated in 1839. He supported himself while getting his education by teaching and other labors. After his graduation from Yale he accepted a position as tutor in Phillips Academy, continuing in that work for four years. It was while there that his thoughts were directed toward the ministry of the church. His parents were Baptists and he himself during his college career had contemplated entering the ministry of that body. He was drawn to the Episcopal Church largely through the influence of his brother, Almon D. Corbyn. He was confirmed in that church in 1843 by Bishop Eastburn of Massachusetts, and on St. Stephen's day of that year was ordained to the diaconate in Trinity Church, Boston. His earnest and candid nature would not permit him to enter the Episcopal Church without carefully studying its teachings and history. He entered most heartily upon the work of the church, first as temporary rector of St. Paul's Church, Boston, and then for a time in Connecticut, where he was ordained to the priesthood in November, 1844, Bishop Doane of New Jersey preaching the sermon. In 1846 Mr. Corbyn went to Missouri and was rector of St. Paul's Church at St. Louis for eighteen months under Bishop Hawks. During this time he published "A Manual of Devotion." In 1848 at the earnest request of the Bishop he became president of St. Paul's College at Palmyra, Mo., and rector of the church there, where he continued most of the time until 1871. Under his management this little Episcopal college came into a flourishing condition. He went to Quincy, Ill., in 1871, where he assumed the rectorship of the Church of the Good Shepherd. Here he exercised a great influence far beyond the boundaries of his parish. Besides his church work he was for many years principal of the Quincy High School until this double duty became too arduous for his declining years. Dr. Corbyn visited England twice, in 1866 and in 1888. There he met many leaders of the Church of England and formed delightful acquaintances. Dr. Corbyn was a profound student of the English classics and considerable of a writer, among his works being poems of great beauty and merit. He had great personal influence over men and induced many young men to enter the ministry of the church. He was indeed a complete man without guile, strong and rugged in character, combined with simplicity, sweetness, and purity. His very presence was inspiring to faith and uplifting to the spiritual sense of those around him. His life was a constant walk with God. He was greatly devoted to the church and believed in its high mission in the world. On Dec. 26, 1901, he quietly celebrated the 58th anniversary of his ordination as pastor and many friends called to pay their respects to the old man and wish him good cheer. He passed away on Good Friday, March 28, 1902. His widow and daughter still reside at Quincy, Ill.

William Beston Corbyn, in a school subsequently known as St. Paul's College at Palmyra, Mo. Here he studied and assisted in teaching for eight years. On Dec. 9, 1855, he was admitted to deacon's orders by Bishop Hawks in Christ's Church, St. Louis. The following autumn the bishop sent him to take charge of the parish at Independence and to look after Kansas City, Mo. He organized the first parish of the Episcopal Church in Kansas City soon after going there. He remained there until the spring of 1861, when he was called to assist in a parish and school for boys in Hamden, Conn. In January, 1864, he returned to Missouri to become a teacher in Mr. Wm. H. Glasgow's family at St. Louis and to officiate on Sundays in a small chapel of Christ's Church. After ten or twelve years' residence in Mr. Glasgow's family he resigned his charge and in April, 1875, he took charge of St. Mark's Parish, Anamosa, Iowa. His father d. when he was 18 years old, so he early became accustomed to hard work and responsibility. After a year at work at Warrensburg, N. Y., he returned to Dudley in 1843 and began work at stone cutting. He went to Rockville in 1846 and took charge of the stone work on the mills then being erected. In 1851 he went to California via Panama, and spent two years in mining. In 1853 he returned to Rockville and the next year began manufacturing envelopes, forming the firm White & Corbin. He also continued his business as a stone mason, erecting buildings in Rockville and Ellington and the stone church at Great Barrington, Mass.

L. A. Corbin

He used the income from this line of work to capitalize the new envelope industry, in which Mr. Corbin was one of the pioneers. In 1857 a mill was built, and later the Florence mill was purchased and adapted to the business and there it is still carried on. The firm of White & Corbin also carried on a considerable gristmill, grain, and coal business in the early days, but this was given up as the envelope business increased. By perseverance and energy the latter was made very successful. Mr. White is now dead and Mr. Corbin is the head of the firm, known now as "The United States Envelope Co." He has been one of the leading business men of Rockville for fifty years and has seen it develop to its present size and prosperity. He was a promoter and director of the Rockville Railroad. Since 1866 he has been president of the board of trustees of the M. E. Church at Rockville; in 1867 he had charge of erecting the present building and he has always been a liberal supporter of the church. He m. Mary Upham of Thompson Sept. 18, 1845. She was b. AMASA CORBIN.
Born at Champlain, N. Y., 1802.
Died at Gouverneur, N. Y., 1881.

In 1830 Amasa Corbin settled upon a large farm four miles from Gouverneur village, St. Lawrence County, N. Y., where he spent the rest of his life. The road passing his farm was, at the time of his settlement, bordered by dense woods. Wolves were plenty, and once he was compelled to protect his flock by throwing fire brands in the air throughout the night. Eight sheep were killed, however. Mr. Corbin made the first cheese in St. Lawrence County, and at one time had the largest dairy, numbering sixty cows. His first season's make of cheese was marketed in Montreal, to which point he hauled it on a sleigh, selling it at three cents a pound. Afterwards, for a number of years, he sent his produce in barrels to Boston and New York commission houses.

Amasa Corbin was a man of peculiar temperament. An ardent hater of shams, fearless in the expression of his opinions, even when, as in 1861, to speak them was tantamount to social ostracism and personal danger; a Democrat of Democrats; a believer that the sons of Ham were predestined hewers of wood, and consequently a cordial opponent of the theory of equality which for forty years enthralled the sympathies of the vast majority of the people in the northern states; honest in everything; a man of marvelous memory, and able to marshal and express his opinions forcibly; quick at repartee and, withal, genial and sociable with everybody, whether of high or lowly station.

His wife was indeed a helpmeet to him. His sometime prodigality was offset by her calculating economy; his tendency to let the burden of life rest easily upon him was balanced by her untiring industry. She was largely the builder of the competence with which both were blessed as the days of their lives came to a close.

(The above account is from the History of St. Lawrence County, by Gates Curtis, Ogdensburgh, N. Y. [1894], and was prepared essentially by J. S. Corbin.)

318. HORACE A. CORBIN (Ezbond, Clement, Clement, Clement, James, Clement), b. April 16, 1828, at Charlestown, N. H.; m. Malvina A. Putnam, April 27, 1858. She was b. July 20, 1829, the dau. of Moses Hewitt and Amanda (Holden) Putnam of Charlestown, N. H. They moved to Union City, Mich. An illustrated magazine, "Peerless Union City," gives the following sketch of Horace A. Corbin:

The eldest of a family of eleven children, he was born and reared among the hills of the Old Granite state. A hillside farm, plentifully besprinkled with rocks and stones, which had descended from grand-sire to sire, taught the lad as soon as he was able to wield the hoe and spade, that life was real, life was earnest, and developed in him in after years that spirit of indomitable energy and perseverance which characterized all his efforts in whatever he undertook. Aside from the manual training which the old farm gave him, he turned to so good advantage the winter terms of school which New England boys were taught to appreciate, that these advantages with several months in a neighboring academy enabled him to teach country schools in the winter, alternating with farm work in summer, until he was twenty-five years of age. He then went to Boston, and served apprenticeship in a dry-goods store for three years. Having obtained a good knowledge of the business, he acted upon Horace Greeley's advice. Selecting Union City as his objective point, where his sisters were married and settled, he lost no time in making his way thither, arriving in the spring of 1856. The next day after his arrival found him established as partner in a general store with his brother-in-law, Hiram Crissy. For twenty-seven years he was engaged in the dry-goods business in this city, only retiring from active life as failing health made it necessary. Mr. Corbin carried the same energy and enthusiasm into his church and Sunday-school relations that characterized him as a business man. For many years he served on the board of trustees for the Congregational church, and for a period of fourteen years he was superintendent of the Sunday-school.

He was in many respects a model Sunday-school superintendent, drawing out the best efforts of others, as well as being most careful and painstaking himself. In regard to his business life it was said of him, "If ever an honest man was born, then Horace A. Corbin was one." He d. Jan. 14, 1896. Mrs. Corbin and her daughter Jennie reside at Union City, Mich.

HORACE CORBIN

Died at Union City, Mich., Jan. 14, 1893.

Charlestown, N. H.; m. Lillie E. Brown at Murfreesboro, Tenn., Dec. 18, 1865.

She was descended on her mother's side from the McIlvaines, an ancient and important family in Scotland. During the religious persecutions there some of them took refuge in the north of Ireland, of whom one, Andrew, came to America about 1729 and settled in Delaware. Mrs. Corbin's line of descent from him is James, Robert, David, her grandfather.

Henry B. Corbin served in the Civil War three and one-half years, and was promoted from lieutenant to captain of Battery D, 1st Mich. Artillery. He participated in the battles of Pittsburg Landing, Stone River, Tenn., Perryville, Ky., Chickamauga, and several other engagements. Both he and his brother John had typhoid fever while in service.

Children:

- i. HARRY E., b. June 29, 1868, at Murfreesboro, Tenn. He is an electrician and a fine musician, residing at Fond du Lac, Wis.
- ii. LAURENE, b. Sept. 29, 1869, at Union City; m. Henry Wallichs of Fond du Lac, Wis. She was educated at the State Normal School at Ypsilanti, Mich., and the musical dept. of Oberlin, and before her marriage was teacher of music in the public schools of Fond du Lac.
- iii. Another child died in infancy.

322. SILAS BOND CORBIN (Ezbond, Clement, Clement, Clement, James, Clement), b. Nov. 7, 1839; m. Ella Spofford, Jan. 4, 1883, at Union, Branch Co., Mich. She was the dau. of Christopher C. and Sophronia P. (Steele) Spofford, and was b. Nov. 7, 1849.

Children:

- i. JOHN C., b. Aug. 22, 1884, at Burlington, Branch Co., Mich.
- ii. ELIZABETH F., b. Sept. 5, 1886, at Sherwood, in the same county.

323. SAMUEL CORBIN (Ezbond, Clement, Clement, Clement, James, Clement), b. July 5, 1843, at Charlestown, N. H.; m. Sophia Church, March 12, 1865. She was b. at Lowell, Vt., Nov. 6, 1843. They had two children, Charles William and Ada A., both of whom d. young.

"Peerless Union City," published in March, 1903, contained the following sketch of Samuel Corbin:

No name is more widely known in the vicinity of Union City, especially among the farmers of this section, than the one at the head of this sketch. Mr. Corbin was born in Charlestown, Sullivan County, N. H., in July of 1843, and when nineteen years of age he came to Union City, where he has since continued to reside. He has been engaged in various mercantile enterprises, notably the boot and shoe and the grocery lines, and during the most of the time he has been a dealer in grain and other products of the farmer. He began the purchase of grain here the year before the Air Line Division of the Michigan Central Railroad was constructed, and was the first grain buyer to utilize the new grain elevator then built here. For a number of years, also, he has made a feature of the wool business, and he is the largest buyer of this commodity in this part of the country, his purchases at this and neighboring places aggregating one-half million pounds per annum. Union City is considered an excellent market for all that the farmer raises, largely owing to the business methods of Mr. Corbin, and this is one reason for the town's popularity with the agriculturists hereabouts. That his manner of conducting business is honorable and satisfactory is plainly shown when we state that a goodly number of the farmers in this vicinity never think of disposing of their products without first consulting Mr. Corbin. He is a large real estate owner, including business blocks and considerable desirable residence property. It will be readily observed that Mr. Corbin is necessarily a busy man, but nevertheless he finds time for the social and other duties that devolve upon him.

He d. suddenly, July 29, 1904, of heart failure, highly esteemed for his fair dealing, kindness, and generosity.

324. JAMES WILLARD CORBIN (Ichabod, Clement, Clement, Clement, James, Clement), b. Nov. 19, 1835; m. Margaret Bowker or Booker of England, April, 1860. He was a soldier in the 14th N. H. Vol. Infantry in the Civil War. He d. Aug. 9, 1904, in Franklin, N. H.

ERNEST A. CORBIN,
Albany, N. Y.

The following sketch of Prof. Ernest Corbin was prepared by Rev. Dr. E. C. Lawrence of Schenectady, N. Y., who was his personal friend from boyhood.

ERNEST A. CORBIN, A.M.

Ernest Albert Morrison Corbin was born on a farm near Warren Center, Bradford County, Pa., March 4, 1847. His maternal grandfather, Rev. Mr. Iveson, was an English Congregational clergyman, sent over by the London Missionary Society as a missionary to the Indians of Long Island. He settled at Moriches, and labored with great zeal and a gratifying measure of success among the aborigines on the coast. He also served as pastor of the Moriches Congregational church from 1825 to 1830. Mr. Corbin sprang from a family of teachers, and doubtless inherited much of his talent for teaching from his ancestors.

Young Corbin, being a strong and sturdy boy, and possessing high intellectual ambition, could not be content with the weary dull round of drudgery in which the majority of farmers passed their time in his boyhood. He therefore left the old farm on the hills, and, coming to Owego, N. Y., entered the academy there in 1863, and spent four years of assiduous study under Prof. Joseph A. Prindle. Mr. Corbin's parents were unable to pay all the expenses of his education, and on this account he found it necessary to husband his slender resources and add to them as opportunity afforded. While preparing for college he helped himself by working mornings and nights to pay for his board, and in vacations he bent all his energies to earning money for tuition books and clothing. In 1865 he united with the Owego Presbyterian church. In the fall of 1867, with three other students, of whom the writer was one, he journeyed to Schenectady, and entered the classical course of Union College. While in college he was never noted as a brilliant scholar, but he won and kept the respect and confidence of the faculty and his fellow-students by his painstaking and conscientious attention to prescribed duties. Honest and upright in his dealings, tactful, industrious, endowed with common sense, affable and friendly, always gentle and patient in his manners, he won and kept many friends. Mr. Corbin was a man of solid worth, with no merely showy attainments. As a member of the Adelphic Literary Society he became an excellent debater. For recreation he preferred walking to other forms of exercise, and thus visited with his chums Troy, Albany, and other towns. He graduated from college in 1871, and later received the degree of A.M. in course. Afterwards he studied medicine in the Albany Medical College, and in the office of Dr. E. A. Vander Veer of Albany. Immediately after finishing his course at Union he worked for a time at civil engineering; then taught the graded school at Stillwater, N. Y., for a year. From this position he entered the Albany Business College for a year as teacher of mathematics. He wished very much to become a surgeon, but, not having the means to continue his medical studies, he accepted the position of principal of the grammar school at Greenbush, N. Y. (now Rensselaer), where he served for nine years. After this he was placed in charge of School No. 7 in Canal St. (now Sheridan Ave.), Albany. During Mr. Corbin's residence in Greenbush he was the prime mover in organizing the Rensselaer County Teachers' Association, and served as its president for several years. In January, 1884, Mr. Corbin was transferred to the Albany High School, as professor of natural sciences, where for the next two and one-half years he labored with success and made many friends. But the chair in the high school not proving altogether congenial, at his own request he was made principal of School No. 20, and continued to occupy this position until his death.

Mr. Corbin, as a rule, supported the Republican party, always, however, aiming as an intelligent and patriotic citizen to vote for the best men and measures. Soon after taking up his residence in Albany he joined the Congregational church there, and served with fidelity and ever increasing usefulness as trustee, deacon, and Bible-class teacher. By nature Mr. Corbin was exceedingly kind-hearted, delighting to help some poor, distressed body over a hard place. Hence early in his manhood he was sought out as a worthy member for brotherhoods, and his name was enrolled in the lodges of Masons and Odd Fellows. On presenting the required proofs of eligibility he was admitted to the Order of the Sons of the American Revolution, being a member of the Philip Livingstone Chapter of Albany.

As a collegian, Mr. Corbin adopted the Latin motto, "Perseverantia omnia vincit," — perseverance conquers all things; he verified it with untiring force and patience all the rest of his life.

In the spring of 1899 our friend was seized with typhoid fever, and, after a long battle, succumbed to the disease Aug. 26th. Three days later he was buried with masonic honors at the Rural Cemetery. His chum and lifelong friend, Rev. Dr. E. C. Lawrence, who had officiated at his wedding just twenty-three years before, conducted the funeral services, preaching from II Tim. 4; 7, 8: "I have fought a good fight," etc. Many former pupils of Prof. Corbin's schools were present, and the principals of the various city schools attended in a body.

Mr. Corbin is survived by his wife, Mrs. Margaret E. (Winne) Corbin, a most estimable lady, a gifted musician, and organist for many years of the First Congregational Church at Albany (over which Dr. Ray Palmer was an early pastor); also by his son, Mr. John Iveson Winne Corbin of Cadis, Pa., who has acquired considerable local fame as a naturalist.

On his return he became an expert horse-shoer and, as he says, "has made the art a deep study," for he regards it "one of the noblest callings and as much a profession as surgery." He has indeed won a wide reputation in this line, and has been called on to manufacture special shoes for fast horses, lame horses, etc., to send to all parts of the country. He has also conducted a school in scientific horseshoeing, and trained many men to be expert in it. He is a lover of fine horses. He lives at Friendship, N. Y., where his children were born.

363. AUSTIN CORBIN (Austin, James, James, James, James, Clement), b. July 11, 1827, at Newport, N. H.; m. Hannah M. Wheeler, Aug. 16, 1853, at Newport. She was the dau. of Simon and Hannah (Haven) Wheeler and granddau. of Rev. Jacob Haven of Croyden.

Mr. Austin Corbin, after receiving a good public school education, went to Boston in 1846, where he was employed as a clerk for a year. Afterwards he studied law and graduated from the Harvard Law School in 1849. He began the practice of law in his own state in partnership with Ralph Metcalf, afterwards governor of the state. Like many a young man of that period, he looked longingly toward the growing West as a field where he would have wider scope for his active mind. In 1851 he moved to Davenport, Iowa, with the intention of following his chosen profession. While successful as a lawyer, he did not practice very long, for his quick eye perceived that the development of the resources of his adopted state was retarded for want of capital, and he conceived the idea of bringing eastern capital there and lending it on good security. Hence, leaving the law business, he formed in 1855 the banking house of Macklot & Corbin. Mr. Corbin had a wide acquaintance with financial men in eastern business circles, from whom he was enabled to command plenty of money with which to carry out his ideas. The business grew and thrived, and was established upon so secure a foundation that it withstood the storm of the panic of 1857, being the only banking house west of the Mississippi that did not suspend payments at that time.

When the National Banking and Currency Act was passed in 1863, Mr. Corbin was the first to apply for and secure a charter. The result was that the First National Bank of Davenport, Iowa, commenced business June 29, 1863, two days earlier than any other association in the United States. The possibilities of enlarging a business already so successful induced Mr. Corbin to remove to New York city in 1865. He opened an office in a little back room at 170 Broadway, with an office boy as his only assistant. The business developed into the Corbin Banking Co., which was founded in 1874.

Mr. Corbin discovered in that year that Manhattan Beach could be made a great resort. He had taken his family there for health reasons and was so impressed with the possibilities that he bought considerable real estate on the beach, formed the Manhattan Beach Improvement Co. and erected the Manhattan and Oriental hotels. He was very particular to maintain the high character of these.

His attention was next turned to the Long Island Railroad, then insolvent, which he saw, by proper management, could be made to yield heavy revenues. He obtained a controlling interest in the stock, and very soon showed that he could make it pay. His work resulted in the great development of the towns along the line of this railroad, especially in making it a residential section.

Having revealed himself as one of the most practical and capable railroad men in the United States, he became prominently identified with the reorganization of the Reading Railroad, then in bankruptcy. He was induced to accept the presidency, and at once entered upon active work in an undertaking which was probably the most stupendous one he ever assumed. In this, as in his previous railway ventures, he was successful, and brought the property to a solvent condition. In his later years Mr. Corbin was deeply interested in making Fort Pond Bay, at the extreme eastern end of Long Island, the terminus of a transatlantic steamship line, which would considerably shorten the time to Europe. Had he lived this would probably have been carried out.

Mr. Corbin never lost his love for nature and for his native place. He established his summer home at Newport, N. H., where he bought large tracts of land and formed a remarkable game preserve. This game park (finely described in the Century Magazine for October, 1897) comprises upwards of 26,000 acres. Within that vast enclosure are kept hundreds of moose, elk, deer of different varieties, bison, and wild swine from the German Black Forest. The estate is about eleven miles long by four wide, diversified by mountain and valley, hence affording a good environment for all these various animals. Their propagation was very successful, and Mr. Corbin put large sums of money into it.

Mr. Corbin met with a very sad death in a runaway accident at his home in Newport, New Hampshire, June 4, 1896. He was thrown from his carriage and so seriously injured that he died within a few hours. His remains were taken to New York, where the funeral was held at St. Bartholomew's church. His sudden death was a great shock to all his friends and wide circle of acquaintances.

Mr. Corbin was a man of great energy and activity. When asked why he did not retire from active business and enjoy his fortune, he replied, "I get my enjoyment in attending to my business. What would this country come to if all the men who projected great enterprises dropped their control as soon as they had made their fortunes?" His robust and active mind, his keen intelligence, his indomitable will, and his rugged independence and self-reliance made him a natural leader among men. Whatever he did was done with his whole strength, and with a power peculiarly his own. He devoted his talents to the accomplishment of worthy objects; his mission was to build up and not destroy. Long Island, long the field of his labors, owes its development and growth more to him than any other. Aggressive, masterful, and fearless as he was, he also possessed the gentler traits of a genial manner, a hearty honesty, and a kindly and generous disposition, which endeared him to his associates.

Mrs. Corbin resides at 76 Park Ave., New York.

364. DANIEL C. CORBIN (Austin, James, James, James, James, Clement), b. Oct. 1, 1832, at Newport, N. H.; m. Louisa Jackson.

Daniel Corbin "was educated at 'The Little Red Schoolhouse' and by the march of events." He went to Iowa at the age of nineteen and was engaged in surveying public lands for two years, in the location and purchase of the same for eastern parties for another two years, and then he went to Nebraska, where he was engaged in contracting and freighting overland government supplies for western military posts, etc. At this time he saw much of and suffered with others during the Indian troubles on the plains. In 1865 he settled at Helena, Montana, where he was engaged in merchandising and mining. In 1868 he obtained a controlling interest in the First National Bank there, was its cashier for five years, and continued to manage its affairs until 1876, when he removed to New York and associated himself with his brother Austin in building the "Manhattan Beach Railway," and the improvement of its estate upon the ocean. He became the managing director of the whole enterprise. His energy, ability, and good management made all his enterprises successful, and his strict integrity and honor win universal confidence. In 1886 he went to Cœur de Alene, Idaho, and organized the Cœur de Alene Railway & Navigation Company, establishing a line of steamers on the Cœur de Alene Lake and River, and building a line of railroad from the head of navigation into the region of the Cœur de Alene mines. He sold this line to the Northern Pacific Railway Company in 1888, and in the spring of 1889 organized the Spokane Falls & Northern Railway Co. In that and the two following years he extended a road northward into British Columbia, 220 miles in length. He sold this line in 1898 to the Northern Pacific Railway Co. Since that time he has not engaged in any regular business except in company with his son, building and operating a beet sugar mill. He resides at Spokane, Wash. Mrs. Corbin d. Aug., 1900.

368. CHESTER CLEMENS CORBIN (Benjamin A., Timothy, Timothy, James, James, Clement), b. Sept. 25, 1841, at Dudley, Mass.; m. Augusta E. Smith, dau. of Henry and Jane (Sly) Smith of Webster, Nov. 14, 1866.

Chester C. Corbin removed to Webster with his parents in 1852, where his father transferred from Dudley the shoe factory which afterwards grew to such size and importance under the firm name "B. A. Corbin & Son." The son entered upon his business career at the age of twenty-one, as junior member of the firm. Four years later he became the managing member. His father died in 1880, but the son continued the business under the old firm name until 1902, when he sold out all but a nominal interest. He was a man of unusual business ability, equal to the management of great financial interests, with a judgment considered particularly wise and safe, and prodigiously active. Hence, as would be expected, he accumulated wealth, but his main object in life was not to make money. He realized the responsibility of men of wealth and used his money generously and wisely to do good. He was a leading member and supporter of the M. E. Church at Webster, in which he was a trustee, steward, and superintendent of the Sunday-school from 1861 to his death. He was a trustee of Boston University and of Wilbraham Academy at Wilbraham, Mass., where he had been a student. He was a member of the board of managers of the Missionary Society of the M. E. Church from 1889 to his death in 1903. Here his advice and judgment were greatly appreciated and relied on. He gave freely of his time and wealth to all these causes. After helping earnestly to raise the $200,000 endowment fund for Boston University, when it was finally subscribed he proposed a season of prayer and thanksgiving to God. He was elected a member of the Wesleyan Association in 1889, where he was very helpful. He was also interested in public affairs and greatly esteemed by his fellow townsmen. In 1881 and 1882 he was chosen as a member of the Massachusetts senate, where he represented his district with ability and dignity and made a fine record. He might have had many other political offices had he cared for them. He was president of the First National Bank of Webster and director in many other banks and corporations in Boston and New York. He was a special member of the firm of Morse & Rogers, shoe dealers at 134-140 Duane St., New York. Mr. Morse says of him, "His was a personality that endeared him not only to the friends who had long known him, but to others whom he only casually met. With strong and decided opinions, he was able to so express them as to give no offense to those who were entirely opposed to his views. He had a wonderful ability to get and hold the esteem of those with whom he came into contact. He was a natural leader, and was a man whose influence was for the world's betterment."

During the latter part of his life he was accustomed to spend his winters in New York. During the last few years he suffered from heart trouble, which caused a partial suspension of his business activities. He died suddenly at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York, March 14, 1903. His funeral was held in Webster, and was doubtless the most impressive which that town had ever seen. All business was suspended during the hour of the funeral and the schools closed. The exercises were conducted by prominent clergymen of the M. E. Church and there were in attendance a very large number of Mr. Corbin's friends from out of town. There was a magnificent array of costly flowers which were afterwards, at the request of the widow, given out to friends. Thus a fitting tribute was paid to the memory of this noble man, who was esteemed and loved by so many.

Dr. Charles Parkhurst, editor of Zion's Herald, who knew both Mr. and Mrs. Corbin intimately, adds these words in regard to the latter: "No sketch does this grand, wise, and useful man anything like justice, that does not refer to the peculiar relation which always existed between his wife and himself. Their devotion to each other was ideal. To an unusual degree she was the complement and inspiration to his life. . . . The unique relation of this man and his wife to each other form, therefore, the most attractive chapter in his life."

393. HON. PHILIP CORBIN of New Britain, Conn. (Philip, Philip, Lemuel, Philip, James, Clement), b. Oct. 26, 1824, at Willington, Conn. His father removed in 1833 to West Hartford, where he settled on a farm. In the labor incident to its management, Philip and his brothers all developed wonderfully vigorous physical frames, and acquired habits of industry and self-reliance which went far towards taking the place of the higher schooling from which they were in a measure debarred by their parents' limited means. Philip, however, after attending the district schools, had the advantage of a term and a half at the West Hartford Academy, and at the age of fifteen, when he took up farm work, was a well informed and promising lad. Strong, active, and willing, he did a man's work and earned a man's wages, which he turned over to his father for the family's support. Finding himself possessed of decided mechanical tastes, he quitted farm work when nineteen years of age and, in March, 1844, went to New Britain, Conn., where he secured employment with Russell & Erwin, and later in the lock shop of North & Stanley. He had not been thus employed a year before he felt sufficient confidence in his skill to bid for a contract on his own account. Filling it to the satisfaction of those with whom it was made, he took another contract, and, calling in his younger brother Frank to his aid, made him his partner. From the profits of the venture they deducted merely enough for their expenses, paying the surplus loyally to their father. In 1849, P. & F. Corbin, in partnership with Edward Doen, as Doen, Corbin & Co., built a small shop, put in machinery, and, working by horse power (steam power then having been introduced only on a limited scale), and on a joint capital of less than a thousand dollars, launched themselves as manufacturers.

Their first aim was to make articles not made by others, in competition with European firms. They began with ox-balls, for tipping the horns of cattle, window-springs, lamp-hooks, etc., and changed to other products when competition produced what they had made. The success of the enterprise was so immediate — the brothers being skillful and earnest workmen, who did most of the manual labor themselves — that they soon drew three of their younger brothers, William (died 1860), Andrew, and George S. (died 1899), into the business, giving each in turn a share in its management. In 1853 the firm was reorganized as a joint stock company, the style "P. & F. Corbin" being retained. From their original productions they soon branched out into the manufacture of certain kinds of locks, bolts, hinges, latches, and general builders' hardware. Plain and low-priced goods were made at first, but in 1868 new fields were entered upon, and the company turned out more ornamental goods than any other manufacturers then made. P. & F. Corbin was the first company to use the bronzing process patented by Hiram Tucker of Boston. The articles, styles, and designs made have been innumerable, and the quantities vast and increasing annually. The company has supplied bronze hardware for the State, War, and Navy buildings at Washington, D. C., the post-office and sub-treasury at Boston, and many other public buildings, and for many great office and business structures everywhere, including many large banks and insurance buildings, and for the fine State Capitol at Hartford. When the brothers began as employers of labor they had one workman in their pay. For years past they have had upwards of 1,800 on their payroll, this number including a large corps of inventors, artists, designers, and pattern-makers, in addition to the other skilled hands. The works and main offices of the company are at New Britain, Conn., and constitute an important feature of that thriving center. Many large buildings make up the works, which cover several acres. Stores with full stocks of the firm's products are maintained also at New York city, Chicago, and Philadelphia. The catalogue and price list of the company's productions takes the form of a beautifully illustrated bound volume of about 800 pages, which is sent to all parts of the world.

In a degree probably ahead of any other manufacturing concern, this company goes into the finer quality of goods, and the excellence and artistic quality of these is not surpassed in any country. In 1882 the Corbin Cabinet Lock Co. was organized for the manufacture of cabinet locks, cabinet and miscellaneous hardware. Of this corporation also Mr. Philip Corbin is president and treasurer. From the inception of the business Mr. Philip Corbin has been the prime factor in its conduct and development, and today, although seventy-nine years of age, he directs its vast operations with the vigor, sagacity, keenness of oversight, and executive ability of a man of sixty or less. Still a man of vigorous frame, excellent health, and quick mental perceptions, his appearance, energy, and decision are a marvel and belie his years. From time to time he has added to his multifarious duties in other directions those attaching to the office of president of the New Britain Machine Co. Another offspring of the great Corbin enterprises is the recently organized Corbin Screw Corporation. It was formed by a union of the screw departments of the Russell & Erwin Co. and of the P. & F. Corbin Co.

Mr. Corbin's close attention to business has not kept him from taking an active part in city and state affairs. He served as warden of the borough before its incorporation, and as a member of the common council subsequently. He was water commissioner of the city for many years and the addition of the city water works was largely supervised by him. As a Republican he was elected to the legislature of 1884, and served as chairman of the committee of insurance. The knowledge and skill which he possesses in mechanical matters, and the habit of inspection and criticism, have been of vast service to him in public life, enabling him to get at and comprehend the technical merits of all measures submitted. In 1888 he was elected state senator, the interests of the district demanding that he should accept the office. He discharged the duties laid upon him with exceptional zeal and ability, proving himself one of the most conscientious and industrious members of the legislature.

Mr. Corbin is a man of singular plainness, of directness of manner, of remarkable simplicity, sincerity, and frankness. His natural ability is self-evident, and impresses the observer at once. Strong, fearless, and broad-minded, his democratic style sits well upon his massive frame, and becomes his simplicity of life and speech. There is a sincere cordiality underlying his character which unmistakably attracts and attaches to him hosts of friends. A noble product of the plain manly and industrious life of New England, he is a credit to his forbears as well as to the institutions of the country and era, and an honor to the business element of America.

He married Francina T. Whiting of New Britain, June 21, 1848. She was b. Sept. 3, 1827, the daughter of Henry W. Whiting.

Children:

394. FRANK CORBIN (Philip, Philip, Lemuel, Philip, James, Clement), b. Jan. 26, 1828, in Willington; m. Mary A. Beckley, April 22, 1852. She was b. June 6, 1833, and d. Nov. 3, 1901.

He began in 1848, with his older brother Philip, the hardware manufacturing business in New Britain which afterwards developed into such great proportions, under the firm name of P. & F. Corbin. (See the souvenir volume of P. & F. Corbin, published in February, 1904.) After 1853 Frank Corbin spent much time on the road as selling agent. He had charge of the New York sales office. In 1860 he gave up his connection with the company to embark in the plumbers' supply business. He went west about 1883 and devoted his attention to the development of mines in Arizona and California during the rest of his life, crossing the continent nine times during that period. He d. at Sonora, Cal., March 3, 1901. He was a man of generous impulses, making friends wherever he went. The cordiality of his manner and his genial nature made him loved by his employees and business acquaintances and welcomed wherever he went.

He entered the business of P. & F. Corbin in 1858, and has since been connected with it. In 1860, on the withdrawal of his brother Frank, he went to New York to take charge of the office there for a time. Mr. Andrew Corbin is known throughout the length and breadth of the land as one of the clearest thinkers in the active American business world, and in no small part is the success of P. & F. Corbin due to his indefatigable industry, his mechanical genius, and his unerring judgment and foresight in the conduct of the affairs of the company. For over forty years he was closely identified with the management, and gave his untiring energies, loyal support, and wise counsels, which aided largely in bringing the standard of the company to its present high rank. Of an artistic temperament, he was always ready with new ideas for the improvement of the goods to be manufactured. Owing to continued ill health he has been obliged since 1903 to relinquish all active service in connection with the company.

Mr. Corbin is a man of rare ability, generous and kind to every one, yet so modest that the public has not known of his many benefactions. Res. New Britain, Conn.

409. LUCIUS ANSON CORBIN (Penuel, Penuel, William, Philip, James, Clement) of Union, Conn., b. Feb. 13, 1829, at Woodstock; m. Almira Sophia Chamberlain, dau. of Benjamin and Almira (Bugbee) Chamberlain, Dec. 17, 1856. She was b. July 12, 1837, and d. June 13, 1894. She was a most estimable woman, always kind, sympathetic and helpful. Lucius Anson Corbin settled in 1858 on a farm in the eastern part of Union, near his father's in Woodstock. He is a highly esteemed and trusted citizen of Union, and has held many town offices, being selectman for fifteen years. He joined the Methodist Episcopal Church at Mashapaug on its organization in 1867, and has since been a valued member and officer. He sold his place in the east of Union in 1904 and has since resided with his dau. Bertha.

Children:

- i. BERTHA LILLIAN, b. Aug. 18, 1864; m. Robert E. Webster of Union, April 15, 1886. He was son of George A. Webster, and was b. Sept. 19, 1861. They reside in Union, where he is a farmer, and has held several town offices; both are valued members of the M. E. Church at Mashapaug.
- ii. ERNEST ELBERT, b. April 2, 1872; m. Martha Josephine Kinney, dau. of Milton H. and Martha (Moore) Kinney, June 15, 1898; she was b. Dec. 26, 1876, at Union. Her grandmother Moore, was Anna Corbin (David, Asahel, Benjamin, Jabez, Clement). They now reside in Southbridge, where he is a foreman with the Hamilton Woolen Co.
Children:
  1. ALTA ALMIRA, b. April 26, 1899.
  2. MILTON KINNEY, b. July 6, 1902.
  3. ANSON ERNEST, b. Sept. 5, 1904.

410. MARY JANE CORBIN (Penuel, Penuel, William, Philip, James, Clement), b. March 14, 1831, at Woodstock; m. Myron Kinney, son of Nathan and Lucy (Wales) Kinney of Union, Jan. 5, 1864. He was b. Feb. 24, 1833. He lived in Union until 1878, where he had a sawmill and a box-shop and carried on an extensive lumber business. In that year he moved to Putnam, Conn., where he established a lumber yard, which business he and his son Elbert still carry on. While in Union he was a deacon of the Congregational Church for fourteen years, and has since held that office in Putnam ten years. He is one of those quiet, reliable, and solid men who form the backbone of the community.

Children:

- i. MARY L. KINNEY, b. March 3, 1865; d. March 6, 1865.
- ii. EMMA JANE KINNEY, b. March 21, 1866; graduated from the Putnam High School in 1886, and from the State Normal School at New Britain in 1890. She was a successful teacher for several years, and is now librarian of the Putnam Public Library.
- iii. ELLEN LUCY KINNEY, b. March 29, 1868; graduated from the Putnam High School in 1886, and from the State Normal School at New Britain in 1890. After teaching several terms, she took a year of study at Oberlin, in 1893 and 1894. She m. Rev. Willard L. Beard of Shelton, Conn., Sept. 5, 1894. He was b. Feb. 5, 1865, the son of Oliver Gould and Nancy Maria (Nichols) Beard of Shelton. He grad. in 1887 from the Derby High School, in 1891 from Oberlin College, and in 1894 from the Hartford Theological Seminary. He was ordained as a foreign missionary at Huntington, Conn., Sept. 11, 1894. On Sept. 20th a "recognition service" was held at the Congregational Church at Putnam, of which Mrs. Beard was a member, and which has since assumed her support, to bid the young missionaries God-speed. They sailed Oct. 27, 1894, as missionaries of the American Board to Foochow, China. Here, owing to the scarcity of laborers, Mr. Beard was put to work almost immediately, even before getting the language. He was chosen president of the theological seminary, and carried on the work of training native preachers. He also had charge of the evangelistic work in the Ponasing station, and made frequent tours, mostly on foot with coolies to carry his baggage. He was very successful in leading the churches to self-support. Mrs. Beard, in addition to the care of her family, carried on work among the women and in the churches, and helped in the multitudinous duties which come to a missionary family. After nearly nine years of successful service they returned on furlough, via the Suez Canal, in 1903, arriving in New York April 25th. After spending a little over a year and a half in this country, during which time they were very active making missionary addresses, they returned to Foochow in Dec., 1904. He is now engaged in general Y. M. C. A. work. Children:
  1. PHEBE KINNEY BEARD, b. June 18, 1895.

411. SARAH ELLEN CORBIN (Penuel, Penuel, William, Philip, James, Clement), b. Oct. 8, 1833, at Woodstock, Conn.; studied at Nichols Academy at Dudley, Mass., and at Woodstock Academy; taught school for fifteen terms, animating her pupils with a desire for learning and a noble character. She m. Edwin Newton Lawson of Union, Conn., Feb. 25, 1861. He was b. Jan. 26, 1832, the son of Paul and Lydia (Holman) Lawson. He was descended from John Lawson, who was b. in Linlithgow, Scotland, in 1678, and was one of the first settlers of Union in 1728. His son Thomas was a captain in the Revolution. Thomas' son Robert, a prominent man in the town, was the father of Paul Lawson.

Edwin Newton Lawson has always lived on the homestead at Union, where he has been a successful farmer, improving his farm until it is probably the best in the town. He has been for many years a leading member and supporter of the Congregational Church at Union, having been deacon for over thirty-five years, and was for many years superintendent of the Sunday-school. He has avoided public office, but was for some time school visitor and started the "select school" in 1881.

Mrs. Sarah E. Lawson, one of the best of mothers, a kind and helpful neighbor and a devoted Christian, died Dec. 31, 1885.

Children:

- i. GEORGE NEWTON LAWSON, b. July 2, 1865. He graduated from the Hitchcock Free High School at Brimfield, Mass., in 1885, from Yale College in 1890, and from the Yale Medical School in 1892. On Aug. 15, 1892, he settled in Middle Haddam, Conn., where he went into partnership with Dr. A. B. Worthington, who d. April 26, 1898. Dr. Lawson was appointed medical examiner for the town of Chatham April 1, 1893, and town health officer July 23, 1901, during a smallpox epidemic. 2. DONALD LAWSON, b. Sept. 29, 1901.

3. CLEMENT CORBIN LAWSON, b. Sept. 25, 1904.

The following poem by Dr. G. N. Lawson of Middle Haddam, a former resident of Union, was read at the dedication of the soldiers' monument at Union on Memorial Day, 1902:

IN COMING YEARS.

What message will yon block of granite bear
To those who in the days to come shall pass this way?

What will it tell the man bowed down with care?
What lesson teach the child who sees it in his play?

In each one, as he looks, some different thoughts will rise,

As each in life has played some different role.
We see the colors suited to our natural eyes;
We feel those yearnings germane to our soul.

Perchance some father, seeing this, may pray:
"God grant my boy may be of those who dare
To follow where the flag of right may lead the way.
That he attain a noble, earnest manhood is my prayer."

The mother, taught by this, will partly know
The tearful eagerness, the trembling pride
Of those who kissed their sons adieu so long ago,
And tried with smiles their aching hearts to hide.

REV. HARVEY M. LAWSON,
1904.

The maid or matron to whose life has come
 The love of some strong, noble, upright man,
 Will know the choking throats that made those others dumb,
 Of hearts that ached at parting as only woman's can.

Some passing youth may feel his pulses swell,
 His muscles tighten and his teeth shut fast;
 The call to do, to dare, to be, may tell
 Of earnest manhood come, of childhood's play-life passed.

This mute memorial of a dark, sad time
 Gives us some hint of that glad future day,
 When wars shall cease in every land and clime,
 When guns shall rust and swords be laid away.

GEORGE NEWTON LAWSON.

Union, Conn., May 30, 1902.

- ii. HARVEY MERRILL LAWSON, b. Jan. 31, 1868; grad. from the Hitchcock Free High School at Brimfield, Mass., in 1886, from the Sheffield Scientific School of Yale in 1890, and from the Yale Divinity School in 1893; ordained at Battell Chapel, New Haven, as a foreign missionary, May 18, 1893; published in the summer of 1893 "The History of Union, Conn," a work of 500 pages. He m. May 23, 1893, Dedie Sarah Baldwin, at Battell Chapel, New Haven, the ceremony being performed by President Dwight. She was b. Aug. 27, 1869, at Litchfield, Pa., being the dau. of Isaac Park and Huldah (Ball) Baldwin. He was descended from Richard Baldwin, who settled at Milford, Conn., as follows: Richard, Barnabas, Theophilus, Henry, Henry, Alsop, Isaac. On July 29, 1893, Mr. and Mrs. Lawson sailed as missionaries of the American Board to India, arriving in Bombay Sept. 10th. They were stationed at Ahmednagar, a city in the Deccan one hundred and fifty miles east of Bombay. Here Mr. Lawson soon engaged in teaching in English in the Mission High School, and later in the Theological Seminary, at the same time learning the Marathi language. Mrs. Lawson also studied the language, and taught sewing and fancy work, music, and elocution. Mr. Lawson did much work among the educated Hindus, giving frequent lectures; he carried on the Y. M. C. A. work, was station treasurer, superintended a book depot, and was chaplain for the Non-Conformist British soldiers. Later he had charge of a district, and made frequent tours. In 1897 Mrs. Lawson's health became so poor that they reluctantly left their work, returning to America via Burma, Singapore, China, Japan, and San Francisco. For a year after their return they made their headquarters in New Haven, where Mr. Lawson, in addition to taking post-graduate studies at Yale, made many missionary addresses in the churches and gave stereoptican lectures with fine effect. In Sept., 1898, he became pastor of the Congregational Church at Brooklyn, Conn., where he remained until 1901, a part of the time being also chaplain of the Windham County jail. In the fall of 1901, for the sake of Mrs. Lawson's health, he went to Pomona, Fla., and took charge of the church there until the summer of 1902. In the winter of 1902-3 he was principal of the Boydton Institute for colored people at Boydton, Va. Rufus Corbin, to whom, as much as to anyone else, the origin of this commemorative record of the Corbins is due, was a self-made man of the best type and one who brought true honor to the Corbin name. He was left an orphan at the age of fourteen, and was "bound out," according to the custom, until he should be twenty-one. Wishing for an education, which his guardian was unwilling to allow him, he ran away and later had the papers transferred. He worked at the Springfield Armory for a time and then went to New York, where he worked days and attended night school taught by a Presbyterian minister. After attending the Hudson Academy one year, he began teaching at Philmont, N. Y., in 1853, where he found his wife. He also taught at Nyack. Soon after he went to New York and entered the employ of the Third Ave. Railroad Co. as clerk. He continued in the employ of this company until his death, being for many years its cashier. The head of the company testified of him, "He was the most just man ever in our service."

RUFUS CORBIN,

He died of typhoid pneumonia, Feb. 12, 1898, and was buried at Philmont, N. Y.

He was a devoted member of the First Collegiate Reformed Church at 121st St. and Third Ave., New York. The church paper, at the time of his death, said of him:

A NOBLE LIFE.

"Not slothful in business; fervent in spirit; serving the Lord."
— Rom. 12: 11.

Rufus Corbin, a faithful and devoted member of this Church, passed from death unto life last Sabbath evening after an illness lasting only a little over a week. He had not been strong for some time, and the frail body could not resist the attack of this last severe illness. He was in the 65th year of his age.

In his death the family has lost a most loving and devoted husband and father, the Church and its pastors a staunch friend and supporter, and the corporation for which he labored a most faithful and trustworthy employee.

At the funeral services, which were conducted by Dr. Elmendorf, assisted by the Rev. Francis Horton, D.D., of Philadelphia and Mr. Malven, a large number of friends gathered to pay their tribute to the memory of the one who was called home.

Both Dr. Horton and Dr. Elmendorf spoke feelingly and touchingly of the nobility of the character of Mr. Corbin. "Truth," said they, "characterized his every action."

He was true and loyal in the highest degree to his family, whom he loved with deepest and tenderest devotion; he was true and loyal to the interests of the corporation which he served so faithfully for more than forty years; he was true and loyal to his loving Saviour Jesus Christ and to the church which now mourns his loss.

The things which make for peace were dear to him, for he loved his Saviour, the Word of God, and the Church of Christ. He was a careful thinker and student, and the study of God's word was his delight. He sought continually to know more of God and His love as revealed in His Holy Word, and as God gave him a fuller knowledge of Himself and His dealings with the children of men, there was manifested in his own character a gentleness and sweetness that is as rare today as it is beautiful.

The sympathy of our people goes out to the lonely wife and daughter, and united prayer arises that the God of all comfort will wipe away the tears which now dim their vision.

"The memory of the just is blessed."

Charles M. Corbin at one time was classed as the heaviest importer of Canadian live stock. He has been an active man all his life, and generally successful in his speculative ventures. Until the "beef trust" obtained control of the cattle trade, and crushed out all competition, he was known as an excellent judge of values in live stock and a prudent dealer. He is now a retired farmer, living in a handsome homestead, breeds a few Holsteins of fine quality and pure pedigree, and is spending a placid old age in serene contemplation of his successes and philosophic acceptance of his defeats, satisfied because the balance is in his favor. He knows a monopoly by instinct and hates it; he discovers a trust while others are searching; he believes he ought to have as good a chance as any one and fights for that privilege. His politics are of that determined sort, prevalent in the family, that admit of no trimming, and no man is in doubt where he stands in any election.

454. JAY SPENCER CORBIN (Amasa, William, Joseph, John, Jabez, Clement), b. Dec. 31, 1840; m. Christia Ann Hill, Oct. 2, 1865. Jay S. Corbin was educated in the district school and in the larger school of self instruction. At an early age he developed a decided taste for mechanics, and constructed an electric machine at the age of fourteen. At seventeen, he began teaching, first in a district school and later in Packard's Business College, New York, and as principal in the Burlington, Vt., Business College. He was thus engaged in teaching and lecturing in various cities for eleven years. In 1867 he became an agent for the Continental Life Insurance Co., first at Lancaster, Pa., and later with his brother Amasa as a manager of the general agency at Philadelphia. Later they held a similar position at Philadelphia for the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. In these positions Mr. Corbin's energy, good judgment, and warm-heartedness brought success and approbation.

Mr. Corbin is an ardent lover of mechanics and thoroughly grounded in its principles and practice; inventor and patentee of many practical, labor-saving devices, especially the "Corbin Disk Harrow"; manufacturer of his own inventions, which gained a world-wide circulation; retired at fifty-five with "enough for a rainy day"; local capitalist, money-lender, and mine promoter and, finally, so as not to rust out with inactivity, a lumber merchant at three-score and five.

Like most of his family line, Mr. Corbin is a positive man; an apostle and exemplar of temperance, has opinions and words to express them; marshals his ideas readily and forcefully on the platform, in which he follows the traditional reputation of his kindred; democrat in politics, religion, and social conditions, by inheritance and choice; free-trader, single-taxer, anti-monopolist, and preacher of the equality of opportunity by precept and practice; reform politician and, as such, candidate for lieutenant-governor on the Liberal Democratic ticket of New York state in 1898; a thorn in the side of political heelers, hacks, grafters, and chevaliers of industry; independent of party ties when emergency demands, and, despite his strenuous temperament, with an ear acutely attuned to the cry of want. Such a man is too independent for popular acceptance, too rigid in his views of right and wrong to bend to prevalent prejudices; too confirmed in social equality to do other than battle against special privilege, government by wealth, corporate exactions, and all the multifarious forms through which the earnings of the producer are transferred to the vault of the plutocrat. Such men are needed in a republic to keep our political life on a high level. Mr. Corbin holds the respect even of those who differ radically from his views. He is a well-known citizen of Gouverneur, N. Y.

455. AMASA CORBIN, JR. (Amasa, William, Joseph, John, Jabez, Clement), b. Dec. 31, 1843, at Gouverneur, N. Y.; m. Alice A. Thorpe, May 10, 1866. She was b. at Bridgeport, Conn., Dec. 23, 1842, dau. of Peter Meeker and Harriet B. (Hubbell) Thorpe.

Peter M. Thorpe, president of an insurance company at Bridgeport, was b. Aug. 13, 1813, son of Joel Thorpe, a sea captain, and ——— Meeker. Harriet B. Hubbell, b. Aug. 26, 1817, was the dau. of Charles B. Hubbell, president of Pequonock Bank, Bridgeport, until his death at the age of 84.

Amasa Corbin was not favored with a military education, but he quaintly says he learned "attention" at District School No. 11, "make ready" at Hopkins Select School at Richville, and to "fire" at Bryant, Stratton & Folsom's College at Albany, and he says he has been "banging away ever since, scattering a good deal and occasionally hitting the bull's eye."

He earned his first dollar trading jack-knives, his second shooting muskrats, his first hundred teaching, and at eighteen became a full-fledged professor in the Burlington Business College. At twenty he was proprietor and half owner of the Bridgeport, Conn., Business College, where he saved up $4,000, and married. At twenty-two he took an interest in the Bryant & Stratton School at Poughkeepsie in competition with the Eastman College, where he says he "kissed his $4,000 good-by, in exchange for valuable experience."

With a handsome horse and a Brewster buggy, the gift of his pupils, as his sole capital, he took up insurance in 1867, and later, with his brother Jay S., at Philadelphia, Pa., gained prominence as a successful organizer and business manager.

In 1879 he became president of the St. Lawrence Mfg. Co., a corporation of his own creation, for the manufacture of the Corbin disc harrow (the invention of Jay S. Corbin), which found a market in every state of the Union and in Austria, Russia, New Zealand, Australia, and South America.

He was one of the pioneers in the great talc industry of his native town, and the first to enlist large capital in the enterprise. He organized the Adirondack Pulp Co. (capital, $750,000) of which he was president, and this company subsequently absorbed a number of competing companies and is now known as the International Talc Co., capital stock $5,000,000.

During the same period he was a breeder of thoroughbred and trotting horses on a small scale at the farm upon which he was born. He also built and equipped the largest creamery in the state, and manufactured the milk of 1,300 cows into butter and cheese; and he found time to serve as president of the Gouverneur Agricultural & Mechanical Society, which he quickly made popular and financially successful.

Since 1897 he has been successfully engaged in the zinc and lead industries of southwestern Missouri, and is credited with having occasioned the great boom there of 1898, when the "Corbin Syndicates" were most active in the purchase of many of the great producing mines of that favored country. He is also interested in the development of a pyrites mine at Gouverneur, for the manufacture of sulphuric acid.

He was the founder of Murray Hill Park (Thousand Islands), upon which is located the Murray Hill Hotel, where the Corbin family reunion of 1904 was held in response to his proffered hospitality.

He was the first and only Democrat to serve his town on the board of supervisors prior to 1904. He was nominated by his party for Congress in 1884, and came within forty-two votes of being the member of assembly from his district in 1892 — Gouverneur was the Republican stronghold of the banner Republican county (St. Lawrence) of the state.

His home is at Gouverneur, N. Y., and he is widely known as a genial gentleman and a man of extraordinary business ability and good judgment.

Mary Sheldon of Suffield, Conn., April 26, 1864. She now (1905) resides at 57 Willard St., Hartford, Conn.

David P. Corbin, A.M., obtained his early education in the schools of Union, Conn., his native town, where he attended both the common schools and the "select schools" (i. e., of the grade of high school), which he was instrumental in starting. He taught several terms in the vicinity to earn money for further education, which he pursued at Groton Academy, Mass., Madison University at Hamilton, N. Y. (now Colgate), and the Connecticut Literary Institution at Suffield, Conn. He graduated from Brown University in 1860. He then became a teacher at Suffield until the second year of the war, when the call came for 300,000 men to serve nine months. He was an intense patriot, enlisted himself Aug. 25, 1862, and raised many recruits in Suffield and Union. These were mustered into Co. G of the 22d Regt., of which company Mr. Corbin was appointed 1st lieutenant. This company served for nine months around Washington and Norfolk. On March 2, 1863, Mr. Corbin was promoted captain. The Grand Army Post at Union is named after him, the D. P. Corbin Post, No. 74. After completing his service in the army he resumed teaching, first at Willimantic, where he started a private high school, then at East Hartford, and again at Willimantic from 1865 to 1869, as principal of the Natchaug school. Here as elsewhere he displayed his splendid abilities as a teacher, thoroughly organizing the school, and imparting to the pupils something of his own energy and enthusiasm. But his energy was too much for his health, which was never robust, and he was compelled to rest from teaching for a time. Then he took the position of principal of the West Middle Public School at Hartford, which he held until his death. Here he overcame all opposition, and his excellent qualifications as a man and a teacher won many friends. After several years of successful work he began to be much troubled with pulmonary difficulties and in 1879, with his brother William, went to Colorado to regain his health. But the disease had progressed too far and he died at Larned, Kansas, March 15, 1880. He was buried near his birthplace at Union, Conn., for which town he always cherished a deep affection.

Child:

- i. FRANK WARREN CORBIN, b. Jan. 28, 1865; a youth of promise and excellent character, a graduate of the Hartford High School and a student of medicine at the University of New York when he died of quick consumption, June 21, 1886, greatly lamented by all who knew him.

460. WILLIAM MELVIN CORBIN (Benjamin, David, Asahel, Benjamin, Jabez, Clement), b. May 13, 1835, at Union, Conn.; m. Josephine Walker, June 27, 1860. She was the dau. of Harvey and Julia A. (White) Walker, and was b. at Union, March 30, 1841. Harvey Walker was a successful merchant and shoe manufacturer at the village of Mashapaug in Union, Conn., a most worthy and true Christian man.

William M. Corbin received his education in the common and select schools of Union, and then went into business in 1853 with Walker, Sessions & Co. of Mashapaug. After the death of Mr. Walker in 1860, Mr. Corbin became the head of the firm, until the business was discontinued in 1881. In addition to an active business life he took great interest in public affairs, and held many offices as selectman, representative in the legislature of 1868, state senator in 1875, deputy sheriff from 1862 to 1880, and sheriff of Tolland County from 1881 to 1884. He was a delegate to the Republican convention in Chicago that nominated James G. Blaine in 1884. He was a strong Republican and a leader in the party, both in town and state. He joined the Congregational Church at Union in 1859 and was a leading member and liberal contributor. In 1881 he took his family to Hartford for educational purposes, where they have since resided.

In 1884 his health became very poor from Bright's disease and for three years he was compelled to give up active business life. He found relief, however, and was called in 1887 to the presidency of the Savings Bank of Stafford Springs, Conn., which was then in an embarrassed condition. He straightened out the affairs of the bank and helped to restore the confidence of the community in it. In July, 1888, he became cashier of the First National Bank of Stafford Springs, in which position he continued until his death. His high character and honorable business record did much to put these institutions on a sound and strong footing with the full confidence of the people. At his death both of these banks passed resolutions recognizing the value of his services. In 1888, with others, he organized the Central Woolen Co. of Stafford Springs, which has done a successful business.

Mr. Corbin was always interested in the welfare of his native town of Union. In 1876 he took the leading part in arranging for a large and successful historical celebration and reunion of old families. In 1892-3 he worked in connection with the present writer, who did the literary work, to secure the completion and publication of "The History of Union, Conn.," a fine town history of about 500 pages, the material for which had been largely gathered by a native of the town, Rev. Charles Hammond of Monson, Mass. Mr. Corbin took the financial responsibility for the work, raising a guarantee fund and looking after the sale of the book.

He died March 21, 1894, at his residence at 57 Willard St., Hartford, and was buried at Union. Mrs. Corbin resides at 176 Collins St., Hartford.

I., and two years at the Connecticut Literary Institution at Suffield, Conn., from which point he enlisted in the 22d Regt. Conn. Volunteers, of which his brother David was lieutenant. He went into camp at Hartford, but on account of the serious illness of his father, Frank Walker of Union was secured as a substitute, answering to the name of J. W. Corbin, until his death. Mr. Corbin afterwards taught school, and then was engaged in business for himself in Willimantic and Providence. From that point in 1874 he went to Europe, where he traveled extensively in the interests of the Atlantic Tubing Co. of Providence, going even to St. Petersburg, and making a very successful business and pleasure trip. Later he arranged to travel for the Howe Scale Co. of Philadelphia, with whom he remained for three years. He then took charge of the southern business of the Howe Scale Co. of New York, which position he successfully held for eight years, spending eight months of each year in the southern states.

In 1890 he became interested in the Tompkins Cures for Bright's Disease and Diabetes, and formed the Tompkins Bright's Disease Cure Co., of which he was the manager up to the date of the incorporation of the Tompkins-Corbin Co., Sept. 1, 1900, of which he became President. His present headquarters are at No. 27 W. 24th St., New York city.

Mr. Corbin has never married. He is a warm friend of his native town of Union, and of the Baptist Church at North Ashford. In 1902 he presented a soldiers' monument to the town, which was dedicated on Memorial Day, 1902, with impressive ceremonies and a large attendance, including many old residents. This monument is unique in paying a just and eminently proper tribute to the mothers who gave their sons to the service of the country, as well as to the surviving soldiers, as the inscription shows:

"Dedicated in grateful memory to the mothers who gave their sons, to the soldiers who gave their lives, and to those who, daring to die, survived the War of the Rebellion, 1861-1865."

496. WILLIAM L. CORBIN (John Leroy, Ira W., Oliver, Clement, Clement, James, Clement), b. Jan. 8, 1872, at Athens, Pa.; m. Ethel Christina Olin, dau. of Harvey Church Olin, Dec. 15, 1904, at East Orange, N. J. He prepared for college at the Homer Academy, Homer, N. Y., entered Amherst in 1892 and graduated, cum laude, in 1896, being poet of his class. He was a graduate student of English at Yale, 1896-1897; principal of the Union School at Canaseraga, N. Y., 1897-1899; librarian of the Norfolk (Conn.) Public Library, 1899-1902; received the degree of A.M. from Yale in 1900; was head of the English department of the Cascadilla School at Ithaca, N. Y., 1902-1904; is now instructor in English in Wells College, Aurora, N. Y.

Prof. Corbin has written several poems of merit. The following appeared just after the death of McKinley:

OUR FALLEN RULER.

The brief uncertain watching time is o'er,
The last great change has come,
The nation's voice is dumb,
Struck by the grief that broods from shore to shore.

One people with one grief! Bowed to the will
Of him who knows the years,
They wait till good appears
Rising benignant from the seeming ill.

A martyr to the cause of liberty,
A kindly, God-led man,
Loyal American,
Felled by the lawless hand of anarchy!

Far-seeing, calm, and resolute he stood —
A lover to the end —
Making his foe his friend,
Pointing his country to a broader good.

With Lincoln and with Garfield let him rest,
And with them let him be
Shrined in the memory
Forever of the nation he loved best.

He succeeded his uncle in 1894 as the ninth Earl of Orford, thus making the American girl the Countess of Orford. Their seat is Mannington Hall, near Aylsham, Norfolk, England, with town residence at 36 Bruton St., Berkeley Sq., London. A newspaper publishes the following:

COUNTESS OF ORFORD.

Lady Orford has returned to London. This lady is one of our popular American peeresses, and was Miss Louise Corbin of New York. She is a great traveler, and has seen as much of distant lands as Mrs. Alan Gardner or Lady Howard Vincent. When at home she is interested in music, gives cheery dinners, dresses well, and pays frequent visits to London and the Riviera. She has no son, but a dear and only daughter, now fifteen years old. Lord Orford has seen many sides of life, in cities, and in uncivilized parts of the world. He was once an officer in the Royal Navy, and suffered shipwreck at sea; he was present at the annexation of the Fiji islands, where no white man had ever trod; later on he joined the Turkish army, and afterwards served at courts, when he joined the late Lord Rosslyn's special mission to Madrid at the marriage of Alphonso XII. He likes sport, is an expert on tarpon-fishing, and wrote on the subject in the Badminton Library. His country place is Mannington Hall, Norfolk.

REV. AND MRS. PAUL L. CORBIN,
American Board Mission, Shanghai, China.

Rev. Paul L. Corbin graduated from Blackburn College in 1898 and from the Oberlin Theological Seminary in 1903. For a year he was a secretary of the Student Volunteer Movement. In 1903 the Oberlin students determined to undertake the support of a missionary in the Shansi mission of the American Board in China, where the missionaries massacred by the Boxers in 1900 were Oberlin students. $1,300 was pledged in a short time, largely due to the admiration felt by all the students for Mr. Corbin, who was selected as the missionary. Mrs. Corbin was also an Oberlin student. He was ordained at Kemper, Ill., Oct. 12, 1899.

A farewell service was held for them at the First Church, Oberlin, Sunday evening, June 12, 1904, when every seat was occupied. Addresses were made by President King, representatives of the Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A., Mr. King and Mr. Fay, students from Shansi, and Mr. Corbin himself. They sailed from San Francisco, Aug. 30, 1904, and have been at Tung Chow up to the present, studying the language. Their station will be Tarku, Shansi, China.

CORBINS IN THE WARS.

The Corbins generally are a peaceable folk, industrious, energetic, and thrifty. But they are true citizens, and when need arises or danger threatens there have been plenty of them to volunteer for military service. Many of them have had titles as officers, such as major, captain, etc. The Sons and Daughters of the Revolution generally seem to find some such ancestor. But there was also at least one private among the Corbins who were soldiers. One of his descendants writes: "I have met a great many people who had ancestors in the Revolution, but they were all generals, colonels, captains, or lieutenants, and as our great-grandfather was the only private that I ever heard of, and thereby the only man behind the guns, the success of the Revolutionary War must have been due to him."

That distinguished living soldier Major-Gen. Henry Clarke Corbin sprang from the Virginia Corbins, so we cannot claim him in our branch. He was born in 1842 in Clermont Co., Ohio, and was the son of Shadrach and Mary Ann Corbin and grandson of Nicholas Corbin, who went from Virginia to Ohio.

I do not know, either, as we can claim that patriotic woman Margaret Corbin, in whose honor the following tablet has been placed in the Holyrood Episcopal Church in New York:

"To the Glory of God and
In Patriotic Remembrance
of
MARGARET CORBIN,
Wife of JOHN CORBIN. Artilleryman.
At the Battle of Mount
Washington, Nov. 16. 1776.
she stood by her husband's side during the Hessian assault, and when he was killed she served his gun until disabled by a severe wound.
Erected by
MARY WASHINGTON COLONIAL CHAPTER,
Daughters of the American Revolution."

But nevertheless we have plenty of soldiers in our own branch to justify the newspaper heading prefixed to a list of fifteen Corbin Revolutionary soldiers, "The Corbins were Fighters."

I. KING PHILIP'S WAR.

JOHN CORBIN, son of Clement, was in Capt. Isaac Johnson's Company, which marched from Roxbury to Rhode Island and took part in the Fort Fight at Mt. Hope, Dec. 19, 1675, which destroyed the Narragansetts. There were 16 men, with 52 "praying Indians," in the company which left Boston July 6, 1675. (History of Roxbury.)

His name is given as from Roxbury in the list of Capt. Johnson's Company, made at Dedham, Dec. 10, 1675. (Mass. Archives, Vol. 67, p. 293.)

A JOHN CORBIN also was in Capt. Henchman's Co. in the Narragansett campaign, and on the pay roll of Dec. 20, 1675, the sum of 16 shillings and 2 pence is given as due to him. This was probably not the same person, as there was another John Corbin in Boston about this time. But that our John Corbin served in this war (though but fifteen years old) is proved by the following:

In later years land in new townships was granted by the Mass. General Court to the soldiers of King Philip's War or their heirs. The last such tract laid out was called "Narragansett Township No. 4," now Greenwich, Mass. Among the soldiers for whom grants were made was John Corbin. But, as he seems to have been dead by this time, the claimant was Nathaniel Sessions of Pomfret, his son-in-law, who married his daughter Joanna at Woodstock in 1707.

II. COLONIAL WARS.

1. From the N. E. Gen. Register, 1896, p. 71:

In Capt. Thomas Cheney's Co. in the regiment under Gen. Dwight for an expedition against Canada in 1746, and which was dismissed Oct. 31, 1747, were the following:

ISAAC CORBIN.

STEPHEN CORBIN.

JABEZ CORBIN.

2. From the Conn. Hist. Soc. Collections, Vol. IX:

CAMPAIGN OF 1755.

DANIEL CORBIN, served Sept. 1-Dec. 5.

JABEZ CORBIN, JR., served Sept. 10-Dec. 5.

Both in the 3d Co. under Major John Payson.

JOHN CORBIN of Killingly, lieut. of same company, served Sept. 1-Dec. 9.

JAMES CORBIN, served Sept. 1-Oct. 16.

CAMPAIGN OF 1756.

DANIEL CORBIN, in Lieut.-Col. Nathan Payson's Co. On pay roll, June 15.

CAMPAIGN OF 1757.

MOSES CORBIN of Danbury (probably not of our branch), in Capt. John Barner's Co. for 18 days' service.

EZRA CORBIN, in Capt. John Carpenter's Co. of Woodstock; marched Aug., 1757; served 16 days.

DANIEL CORBIN, corporal in do., 16 days' service.

3. From Mass. Records:

JAMES CORBIN (James, Clement), is mentioned in 1724 as being in Capt. Wm. Chandler's Co.

JOSEPH CORBIN (Jabez, Clement), was in the same, Oct. 30, 1724.

JAMES CORBIN (James, James, Clement), is mentioned as a "Centinel" at Boston, June 27, 1749.

THOMAS CORBIN, under Capt. Sam'l Willard, 1748.

ELIPHALET CORBIN (Jabez, Clement), "Centinel," 1749, under Capt. Josiah Willard.

JAMES CORBIN of Dudley (same as above), Feb. 24, 1757.

EPHRAIM CORBIN (James, James, Clement), May 7, 1759, Corporal Jeremiah Larned's Co.

MOSES CORBIN, 1759, Maj. Ashley.

STEPHEN CORBIN, 1757. Sunderland.

ROBERT CORBIN of Rehoboth (Jabez, Clement), in

Capt. Philip Walker's Co., 1759; is believed to have died in the service and to have been buried at Troy, N. Y.

JAMES CORBIN of Charlton (probably same as above), in Capt. Jonathan Fletcher's Co. in 1760.

III. THE REVOLUTIONARY WAR.

The following facts are taken from the two volumes of "Massachusetts Soldiers and Sailors in the Revolution" (indicated by "Mass. in Rev."), from the book "Connecticut Men in the Revolution" (indicated by "Conn. in Rev."), from records of the Pension Bureau, and from family tradition. As the record here is abbreviated from those sources, the reader is referred to them for fuller details.

1. AMASA CORBIN (John, Jabez, Clement). Lexington Alarm, 7 days; in 8th Co., 3d Regt. (Gen. Putnam's), May 10-Dec. 6, 1775; at the capture of Burgoyne, Aug. 23-Nov. 9, 1777, in Capt. Stone's Co. (Conn. in Rev.) Also in Capt. Samuel Clark's Co., Col. Simonds' Regt., for three days in Oct., 1780, in an alarm to the northward. (Mass. in Rev.)

2. LIEUT. ASA CORBIN (John, Jabez, Clement). Lexington Alarm, 5 days; in 8th Co., 3d Regt., May 8-Dec. 14, 1775.

3. ASA CORBIN (James, James, Clement). In Capt. Nathaniel Healy's Co., Col. Ebenezer Larned's Regt., in the fall of 1775; also in Capt. Nichols' Co., Col. Jonathan Holman's Regt., for five months in 1776, being in the battle of White Plains. Was a pensioner. (Pension Bureau.)

4. ASAHIEL CORBIN (Benjamin, Jabez, Clement). Lexington Alarm, 5 days; in Lieut. Morris' Co., 11th Conn. Regt., New York, 1776. (Conn. in Rev.)

5. CLEMENT CORBIN (Clement, James, Clement). (As both Capt. Clement Corbin, b. 1733, and his son Clement, b. 1764, were soldiers in the Revolution, it is rather difficult to tell to which each record applies. It is believed, however, that the following is correct.) In Capt. Samuel Chandler's Co., 11th Regt., 1776; was in march to Westchester, Sept. 14, 1776; sergeant in Capt. Williams' Co., Col. Johnson's Regt., in Jan., 1788, in Rhode Island. (Conn. in Rev.)

6. CLEMENT CORBIN (Clement, Clement, James, Clement). In Capt. Erastus Wolcott's Co., Col. Grosvenor's Regt., from Dec., 1780, to the end of the Revolution; was made sergeant for meritorious service; was a pensioner in New Hampshire in 1818 as a Revolutionary soldier from Connecticut. (Pension Bureau.)

7. DANIEL CORBIN of Winchester, Conn. (Probably not a descendant of Clement.) Enlisted Dec. 23, 1776, as a minute man. (Conn. in Rev.)

7½. DAVID CORBIN of New Fairfield, Conn. Corporal in Col. Lamb's Artillery, 1777 to 1782.

8. ELIJAH CORBIN (Clement, James, Clement). Lexington Alarm, 7 days; sergeant in Capt. Samuel Chandler's Co., Col. Eb. Williams' (11th) Regt., 1776, around New York. (Conn. in Rev.)

9. ELIPHALET CORBIN (Robert, Jabez, Clement), from Rehoboth, Mass. Served in Capt. Bliss' Co., Col. Walker's Regt., 3 months, 11 days in 1775; also in Capt. Drown's Co., 1776; also in Capt. Joseph Perry's Co. Was a pensioner from Mass. (Mass. in Rev.)

10. ELISHA CORBIN (Elisha, James, Clement) of Dudley, Mass. Lexington Alarm, 6 days, in Capt. Eb. Craft's Troop, Col. Larned's Regt.; sergeant in Capt. Samuel Curtiss' Co., Col. Larned's Regt., enlisted April 26, 1775, served 3 months, 13 days; in Capt. Nathaniel Healy's Co., Col. Jonathan Holman's Regt., at Fort Edward, Oct. 17, 1777, service 16 days; served also 9 months from arrival at Fishkill, June 7, 1778. Age 32, height 5 ft. 10 inches, complexion light.

11. ELKANAH CORBIN (James, James, Clement). Lexington Alarm, 7 days. (Conn. in Rev.) In Capt. Jonathan Houghton's Co., Col. Smith's Regt. (Mass. in Rev.)

12. EPHRAIM CORBIN (James, James, Clement) of Dudley. Private in Capt. Healy's Co., alarm of April 19, 1775; sergeant in do., enl. April 27, 1775, served 3 months, 11 days; sergeant in Capt. Abel Mason's Co., Col. Job Cushing's Regt., Aug. 16, 1777, to Nov. 30, 1777, in the Northern Army. (Mass. in Rev.)

13. EZEKIEL CORBIN (Jabez, Jabez, Clement). In Capt. Banister's Co., Col. David Wells' Regt., May 8 to July 8, 1777; marched to Ticonderoga. (Mass. in Rev.)

14. JAMES CORBIN (James, James, Clement). Probably in Capt. Samuel Flower's Co., Col. John Greateon's Regt., July 10, 1779, to April 10, 1780, and from July 9, 1780, to Oct. 10, 1780. (Mass. in Rev.; it is difficult to tell whether this service belongs to the father or son; the father is said to have lost a leg in the Revolution.)

15. JAMES CORBIN (James, James, James, Clement), afterwards "Dr. James." Enl. from Charlton. In Capt. Lamb's Co., Col. Davis' Regt.; age 17; marched to Springfield, July 8, 1779, for 9 months. (Mass. in Rev.)

16. JOB CORBIN (probably not from Clement), from Berkshire Co., Mass. In Capt. Wilcox's Co., July 8 to 21, 1777; also in Capt. E. Fitch's Co., July 21 to Aug. 14, 1777. (Mass. in Rev.)

17. JONATHAN CORBIN (Jabez, Jabez, Clement). In Capt. Manning's Co., 2d Regt. Conn. Line; enl. May 26, 1777; served 8 months, to Jan. 9, 1778; was on the Hudson, at Valley Forge, Monmouth, and Stony Point. (Conn. in Rev.)

18. JOHN CORBIN (Philip, James, Clement) (?). Lexington Alarm, 6 days under Capt. Nathaniel Marcy. (Conn. in Rev.)

19. JOHN CORBIN (John, Jabez, Clement). Probably the one who marched under Capt. David Noble, April 22, 1775, from Pittsfield, Mass., to Cambridge for 6 months; also in Lieut. Ford's Co., Col. Rossiter's Berkshire Regt., Aug. 13 to 20, 1777, at Bennington. (Mass. in Rev.) This John Corbin was called "Captain," but whether he officially held that rank during the Revolution is uncertain. Family tradition also says that he was present at the battle of Bemis' Heights and at Burgoyne's surrender.

20. JOSEPH CORBIN (John, Jabez, Clement). Enl. at Killingly, Conn., Sept. 1776, for three months under Capt. Samuel Chandler, Col. Dennison; enl. Dec., 1776, for two months under the same captain; enl. for one month in the fall of 1778 at Williamstown, Mass., under Capt. Clark, Col. Simons; enl. in the spring of 1779 for three weeks under the same; was in Capt. Sloan's Co., Col. Bain's Regt., Oct. 11 to 22, 1781, from Berkshire Co., Mass., on an alarm to Saratoga. He applied for a pension at Champlain, N. Y., and received $22.33 per annum from March 4, 1831. (Conn. and Mass. in Rev.; Records of Pension Office.)

21. JOSHUA CORBIN (Elisha, James, Clement) of Dudley. In Capt. Healy's Co., Col. Holman's Regt., at Fort Edward, Oct. 17, 1777, for 30 days; also in Capt. Nichols' Co., Col. Holman's Regt., Gen. Fallow's Brigade, five months; was at the battle of White Plains in 1776. A pensioner. (Mass. in Rev. and Pension Bureau.)

22. LEMUEL CORBIN (Philip, James, Clement), from Dudley. In Capt. Craft's Troop, alarm of April 19, 1775, for 10 days; sergeant in Capt. Healy's Co., marched to Rhode Island on alarm of Dec., 1776, for 21 days; was at Providence, Jan. 21, 1777; lieut. in Capt. Hamant's Co., Col. Denny's Regt., Oct. 18, 1779; disch. Nov. 23, 1779; captain in Col. Davis' Regt., July 30 to Aug. 12, 1780, on an alarm to Rhode Island; captain of the 12th Co., 5th Worcester County Regiment, Mass. Militia, in 1780. (Mass. in Rev., where the name Samuel is incorrectly inserted.)

23. MOSES CORBIN (James, James, Clement). Lexington Alarm, five days. (Conn. in Rev.) Perhaps this Moses was also the one who was sergeant in Capt. Fitch's Co., Col. Hopkins' Regt. from Berkshire, July 15 to Aug. 3, 1776, on an alarm to the Highlands, N. Y. A "Moses Corben" was in Capt. John King's Co., Col. John Brown's Berkshire Regt., from June 29 to July 27, 1777.

24. NATHANIEL CORBIN (Elisha, James, Clement). Drummer in Capt. Curtis' Co., Col. Larned's Regt.; enl. May 1, 1775; served three months, eight days. Enlisted also from Ludlow, Mass., as corporal in Capt. Mason's Co., Col. Cushing's Regt., Aug. 16 to Nov. 30, 1777; drafted at Sturbridge, Mass., for service in the Northern Army. Perhaps he is also the "Nathan Corbin" given in "Mass. in Rev." in Capt. Stutson's Co., Major Proctor's detachment of militia, Dec. 10, 1777, to March 1, 1778. (Mass. in Rev.)

25. PELEG CORBIN (Samuel, James, Clement). Lexington Alarm, four days; doubtless in other service.

26. PETER CORBIN of Winchester, Conn. (not from Clement). In Conn. militia, Col. Canfield, 1781; July 16 to Dec. 3, 1780, on the Hudson. (Conn. in Rev.) He went to Saratoga in 1776 in 8th Conn. Regt. (See History of Winchester.)

27. PHILIP CORBIN (Philip, James, Clement) (?). In Capt. Wildman's Co., 16th Conn. Regt., on an alarm expedition to Fairfield, Norwalk, etc., July, 1779.

28. CAPT. SAMUEL CORBIN (Samuel, James, Clement), Dudley, a captain in the Revolution (?), of the 12th Co., 5th Worcester County Regt. of Mass. Militia (?). (Mass. in Rev.) Lemuel Corbin was captain of this company.

29. STEPHEN CORBIN (Elisha, James, Clement) of Dudley. In Capt. Coburn's Co., Col. Grout's Regt.; age 20, farmer at Dudley; enl. Jan. 2, 1781, for three years in the Continental Army; received bounty April 18, 1781, for this enlistment. (Mass. in Rev.)

Enl. from Dudley, Mass., as a private under Capt. Edes, in Col. Henry Jackson's 9th Mass. Regt., transferred to the company of Capt. Bradford, Col. Sprout's 2d Mass. Regt.; disch. Dec. 23, 1783, at West Point, N. Y. Applied for pension June 11, 1818, while a resident of Campbell, N. Y. (Records of Pension Bureau.)

30. TIMOTHY CORBIN (James, James, Clement) of Dudley. In Capt. Nichols' Co., Col. Holman's Regt., Gen. Fallow's Brigade, for five months in 1776, around New York; was in the battle of White Plains. (From affidavits in Pension Bureau with reference to Asa Corbin.)

31. WILLIAM CORBIN (Philip, James, Clement). Lexington Alarm, six days; other service. (Conn. in Rev.)

(Besides the above there are in the volumes mentioned many by the name of Corben, Coburn, Cobin, etc., some of whom may belong to our race, as the spelling was very free and easy in those days.)

IV. WAR OF 1812.

I. From "Conn. Men in Rev., War of 1812, and Mexican War."

AARON (Peleg, Samuel, Samuel). Sergt. at New London under John Chandler. June 21, 1813-June 24, 1813.

AARON. Sergt. at New London under Jacob Lyon, June 5-July 15, 1813.

ABEL (William, Philip, James). Private at New London under Samuel Dresser, June 21-July 15, 1813.

ALPHEUS (Moses, James, James). Captain, New London, under Col. Jonathan Lyon, June 21, 1813-July 15, 1813.

JAMES. Private at New London under Ebenezer Kelly, June 21, 1813-July 24, 1813.

JAMES. Private at New London, June 25-July 15, 1813, under Solomon Sikes.

SOLOMON (John, Philip, James, Clement). Lieut. at New London under Hadlock Perrin, June 21, 1813-July 14, 1813.

II. Other Sources:

JOSIAH CORBIN (Joseph, John, Jabez, Clement).

CAPT. JOHN CORBIN (Asa, John, Jabez, Clement). From S. Williamstown, Mass.; lieut. and captain.

LETTER FROM GEN. HENRY C. CORBIN.

HEADQUARTERS PHILIPPINES DIVISION,
MANILA.

February 24, 1905.

MR. H. M. LAWSON, Hanover, Connecticut.

My Dear Sir:—I am in receipt of yours of January 10th, inclosing circulars, and making inquiries concerning the genealogy of my people.

In brief, I was born in Clermont County, Ohio, on the 15th of September, 1842. I am the oldest son of Shadrach and Mary Ann Corbin. My mother was Mary Ann Clark. Both my father and mother were natives of the county in which I was born. My father, having been born in 1810, was among the oldest native born of that part of the state. He died two years ago this month, being in the ninety-third year of his age at the time of his death.

My father's father's name was Nicholas, who, in about the year 1790, married Mary Ann Inloes, of the eastern shore of Maryland. My great-grandfather was John Corbin, who served as an enlisted man in the 3d Virginia Infantry during the War of the Revolution. His wife's maiden name was Peddicord. His father's name was Nathan. This is as far back as I have definite information of my ancestry.

There are two traditions in the family,—one that we are the descendants of two brothers who came to this country from the north of Wales along with the expedition of Lord Baltimore early in the seventeenth century and settled in Virginia. Another tradition is that, coming from the north of Wales and landing somewhere on the middle Atlantic coast, they reached Virginia by the way of New England. This story I have never been able to verify.

My life, as you can understand, since eighteen years of age, the time I entered the Army, has mostly been away from home. The older members of my family have long since passed away, and the most of the information that I give you comes from things that were told me when I was a boy, and have since been verified by the gravestones in the family burying ground.

My great-grandfather, very soon after the Revolutionary War, located my grandfather and his brother in southern Ohio, where, on the farms where he located, the family have lived ever since. Just how many of the family were left in Virginia I never have known. There are, however, to my knowledge, quite a number of them living on the James River at this time. I have had invitations from time to time to visit them, which I regret very much I have never been able to do.

If in the genealogical work in which you are engaged you can find the connecting link, I shall be very much gratified, and shall be glad to answer any further direct inquiries that the information I give you suggests.

I have referred your letter and circular to Judge Perry J. Nichols, Batavia, Ohio, who has knowledge of the time and place of the marriage of my grandfather. Inquiry from the local records at the places that he may name may possibly be of assistance to you.

Very truly yours,

HENRY C. CORBIN.

Judge Nichols, referred to above, a life-long friend of Gen. Corbin, has sent the following:

Clermont County is on the Ohio River, about sixteen miles above Cincinnati. Point Pleasant, a small village within its borders, is known the world over as the birthplace of General Grant. Within two miles of Point Pleasant yet stands the old home of the Corbins, where General Henry C. Corbin was born. Some twelve miles from this place is the pretty little village of Batavia, where the old church occupied and used by Henry Ward Beecher is pointed out to strangers who visit the village.

This county is only about one hundred years old, and from its homes have gone out into the world these three great men.

General Corbin acquired his education at "Parker's Academy," a school known throughout the state for its efficiency in fine moral and educational qualities. General Corbin's eminent success through life may in part be attributed to the impressions received from this old Academy in Clermont County.

When the great Civil War was upon us he was among the very first to enlist, and no young man entered the service of his country with more enthusiasm than he. When the war was over his merit was recognized by the eminent men of the land, and he was soon called to Washington city, where he became the trusted adviser and friend of not only one president but of all the presidents since that time.

When President Garfield fell by the cruel shot of the assassin no one outside of his immediate family was admitted with so much confidence to the home circle and even to the room where the president lay dying as was he.

The writer visited Washington soon after General Corbin had come to be known in that city, and was introduced by him to many of the foreign ministers and consuls and leading men of the various departments, and, on his return to Ohio, remarked to his friends that General Corbin's congenial nature and easy bearing, together with his fine personality, would soon place him with the great men of the world, and that time and events would make him one among the foremost men of his country.

These thoughts have been more than verified. Often a man looms up in one administration at Washington city, and then the end comes; but not so with General Corbin, he was never shaken in the position he had gained, but steadily and surely advanced until he had reached the topmost rung, and is now placed by President Roosevelt in one of the most responsible and delicate positions, one of national and international importance, and while Gov. Taft was complimented throughout the world for his masterly movements in the Philippines, both civil and military, General Corbin in taking his place has strengthened and amplified the great work begun by his predecessor.

General Corbin's wife, Edyth Patten Corbin, was born and raised in Washington city. She has been a great traveler, and is now with the General in Manila, and, like her husband, has put aside her many friends and life-long associations at the national capital to aid in the development and betterment of the new people. She is refined and accomplished in every sense of the word, and gives great assistance to the General in his new field of action.

P. J. NICHOLS.

THE JENNINGS ESTATE OF ENGLAND.

About the year 1855 there was a great deal of interest and excitement among the Corbins in America concerning the Jennings estate in England. A wealthy Mr. Jennings there had married a Miss Corbin, daughter of Peter Corbin. This Peter Corbin willed his property to his daughter. She had two brothers, Peter and Robert, who both died without heirs. Both Mr. Jennings and his wife died without issue, and leaving no near relatives. The estate was variously reported as amounting to from £2,000,000 to £40,000,000, the latter probably vastly exaggerated. This fortune, whatever it was, was kept according to the secure laws of the British government, — until the rightful heirs should appear and prove their claims. The newspapers both in England and America published glaring accounts of it, and consequently there was a stir of excitement among those who bore the name of Jennings or of Corbin. The various branches of Corbins in this country held meetings and appointed agents to take steps to secure this fortune. A great interest in genealogy was suddenly aroused. Such interest was usually very little at that time. The compiler has made efforts to find what results were obtained in tracing the ancestry of the Corbins back to England, and in establishing the relationship of the various branches of Corbins north and south in America, but with little result. Probably these things were never made out, although confident assertions were made that there was no doubt that the relationship to Mrs. Jennings could be proved.

The Corbins of Bainbridge, Chenango Co., N. Y., appointed Squire Corbin as their agent. He was eager in the quest, and made a trip west in 1855 to look up Corbins and get them to act together. He reported finding Hollis Corbin in Michigan, who could only trace the Corbins back to Dudley. A William G. Corbin of Ann Arbor said that his uncle, Peter Corbin of Buffalo, could trace his lineage to 1604. Squire Corbin also made a trip to Virginia and North Carolina to take up the matter. But those that he saw were wealthy, and did not care to go to the trouble of what might prove a wild goose chase.

John A. Corbin of Owego was another agent to interest parties. Another heir, Corbin Kidder, was going to start for England to get the money. He thought "it was not best to make it public except among relations, for he might be robbed or murdered on his way back."

Many of these Corbins seem to have had great expectations aroused and bright anticipations of becoming suddenly wealthy. In view of the outcome, some of the old letters on the subject seem almost ludicrous if not pathetic. But the only Corbin that the compiler ever heard of who ever made anything out of the Jennings estate was S. C. Corbin of Copenhagen, N. Y., who sold out his claim for $10 to an eager buyer. I heard, however, that one of the Jennings heirs sold his interest for $50,000!

It seems that the Jennings family carried the matter farther than the Corbins. They formed an association, and sent agents to England to investigate and lay claim to the estate. The report of these agents was published under the title "Report to the Jennings Association." They found that the stories of the property were greatly exaggerated, and that the estate was already in the possession of a Jennings heir in England.

Sic transit divitiarum expectatio!

CORBIN FAMILY REUNIONS.

Various local branches of the Corbin race have held reunions from time to time. The Corbins of Bainbridge, N. Y., who are numerous and closely related, and who mostly live in the same region, hold an annual reunion on the fourth of July, with an attendance of some fifty or sixty, including intermarried families.

In 1903, and again in 1904, there were held delightful reunions of the descendants of Dea. Penuel Corbin of West Woodstock, Conn., at Roseland Park, Woodstock. These included also the Kinneys, an intermarried family. These Corbins have continued to live within ten miles of where Clement Corbin and his son James settled at Woodstock in 1687, that is for more than two hundred years.

At the reunion in 1904 it was voted to extend an invitation to the Corbins everywhere to a general reunion to be held in the same place in August, 1905, and a committee of arrangements was appointed, with the present compiler as chairman.

The first attempt at a general Corbin reunion was made in the summer of 1904, when Mr. Amasa Corbin of Gouverneur, N. Y., extended an invitation to a hundred Corbins, representing the various branches of the family, to accept his hospitality for a few days at the Murray Hill Hotel on Murray Isle, Thousand Islands. In response to this generous invitation a number of Corbins from various localities came together on the fifth and sixth of July and remained until the ninth. The number would have been larger had it occurred at a different time of the year and a longer notice been given. But those present, who were mostly strangers to each other at first, soon formed delightful friendships, and the days passed quickly and pleasantly, interspersed with excursions and sails in that delightful region. The host was assisted by his talented niece, Mrs. Alice Livingstone, and her versatile husband, Rev. C. A. Livingstone, who made it very pleasant for all. The family historian passed a busy time securing information from each one for the book. On the Friday evening before the party was to break up a banquet was held, after which each one was called on for a speech, and very interesting they were. Among those present were Rev. S. C. Corbin of Copenhagen, N. Y., whose white head was "a crown of glory" and whose winsome spirit will make him pleasantly remembered by all present; Mr. H. A. Corbin, "the Friendship Corbin," who with his wife and other members of the family came from Friendship, N. Y.; Mr. Jay S. Corbin, brother of the host, from Gouverneur, N. Y., whose vigorous and picturesque political discussions aroused much interest; Mr. Bruce Corbin, a student in Syracuse University, preparing for the Methodist ministry; Mr. John W. Corbin, a genial gentleman from New York, who with his skill in diagnosing diseases discovered that the host was suffering from "enlargement of the heart"; Mrs. Margaret Corbin of Albany, who is "proud to be a Corbin," and whose husband, Ernest Corbin, did so much pioneer work on this genealogy; Mr. and Mrs.

Webb Corbin of Dryden, N. Y., and several others. After passing a hearty vote of thanks to the host for his kind hospitality, the party broke up and the next morning separated with the hope that other such reunions might be held in the future.
